FOREWORD

THIS genealogy, covering six generations over a period of 155 years, extends from the birth of Jasper Taylor in 1794 to the year 1949. With very few exceptions, it names and places by specific dates all his direct descendants. In addition, by means of footnotes and appendices, it traces back the ancestry, as far as practicable within a study of this scope, of each person whom every recorded descendant of Jasper Taylor married. The extent to which such lineages are traced varies. In some instances only the parents are given. In others the family is traced back many generations, in one case to the early 15th century.

Although data on the family of Jasper Taylor were published in skeleton form as an appendix to the author's Andrew Mills and his Descendants (1944), nearly all family history in the present book is now published for the first time. Besides the strictly genealogical facts, here are placed on permanent record many events of interest both to members of the family and to others which would otherwise be lost. This applies particularly to narratives concerning pioneer settlers both in the Taylor and allied families.

The total number of direct descendants of Jasper Taylor recorded is 457. There are 10 persons in the third or later generations as to whom it has not been possible to determine whether they had children. Of the 457 persons, 237 were male and 220 were female. A total of 354 were living in 1948.

Fifty-one of Jasper Taylor's descendants (more than 10%) served in the armed forces of Canada, the United States, and Great Britain during the Spanish-American and the two World Wars. Ten of the fifty-one lost their lives.

The occupations of 147 of his descendants are known. Fifty-four (37%) were engaged in the professions, 11 being teachers, 10 nurses, 10 ministers, missionaries and in other religious occupations, 4 lawyers, 2 doctors, 2 editors, and 15 in various other professions. Fourteen of his descendants married professional men.

The next largest occupational group is business and industry, which includes not only self-employed persons but executive and clerical (but not professional) employees of industrial and commercial establishments. In this group are 31 persons (21%), of whom 24 were men and 7 were women. Twenty-six descendants married men belonging to this group.

Agriculture, including dairying and nursery work, claimed 30 (20%). Thirty-nine of the women descendants married farmers.

Jasper Taylor himself was a skilled artisan. Twenty-six (18%) of his descendants were artisans or workmen, and 11 of his female descendants married men in this occupational group.

In every part of the book rigorous standards of accuracy and authenticity have been set up and applied. While it cannot be expected that no errors have crept in, it is believed that they are very few and minor and that the statements made may be relied upon with confidence.

In order to show clearly the relationship of each direct descendant to his ancestor Jasper Taylor, a system of code numbers has been adopted. The figure 1. begins every code number and refers to the common ancestor. The next following numbers (separated by periods) denote children of Jasper Taylor in the order of their birth. Thus 1.5. represents Jasper's fifth child, James. Similarly 1.5.1. represents James's first child, Wellington, and 1.5.1.3. represents Wellington's third child. It will be noted that the number of divisions in each code number tells at a glance how many generations the bearer of the number is from Jasper Taylor.

Arrangement of the articles is such that the account of each branch of the family is finished down to the latest generation before the account of the next branch is begun. Thus all the children of Job (1.1.) are described before any of Sarah's (1.2.), and all the children of Job's eldest child (1.1.1.) before the sketch of his second child (1.1.2.). An asterisk (*) before a name in lists of children indicates that a biographical account of the individual follows.

A complete index of names is provided. Married women are indexed by their maiden names only.

The author wishes to express her thanks to those who contributed family records and personal recollections, some of whom went to considerable pains to assemble data and place them at her disposal.

More particularly she wishes to acknowledge the assistance given by her husband, John Wilson Taylor, in writing and editing and in the travel and research which were essential for the completion of the book in its final form.

JASPER TAYLOR

JASPER TAYLOR (1794-1878) was born 5 April 1794 at Highway,[a] Wiltshire, England, a hamlet of some 800 acres about four and one-half miles northeast of the market town of Calne and approximately 97 miles west of London. He was a carpenter by trade and for upwards of 20 years was employed by the family which owned the land comprising the hamlet. He resided on the only freehold in the parish.[b]

On 7 June 1819, when he was 25 years of age, he married Anna Whale (Nov. 1, 1795-Aug. 1, 1853), also of Highway. They had nine children, all baptized in the local parish of the Church of England.

Twenty-three years after his marriage and in his 49th year Jasper broke his ties with his homeland and, with his wife and children, the eldest twenty-one and the youngest two years of age, took ship for Canada on 17 April 1842.

This decision was taken at a time when wages as measured by goods they would buy had been declining for a long time. England was in the throes of agitation against the so-called Corn Laws, the purpose of which was to keep the price of wheat high for the benefit of the landowners by placing a tax on imports. The result was to keep the cost of living high for wage earners, the class to which Jasper Taylor belonged. The Chartist movement, organized in 1838, finally succeeded in a. Highway is described in Gazetteer of the World, Vol. IV, as a parish of Wiltshire, 4½ miles northeast of Calne; area 950 acres; population in 1841, 147. "Hiwi" is mentioned in Domesday Book as belonging to Ralph de Mortimer. See Aubrey & Jackson's Wiltshire Collections, 1659, p. 60.

In 1938 the late Canon Peters, Bremhill Vicarage, Calne, Wiltshire, reported the population of Highway "in spite of a few exceptionally large families" to be about 50 and, referring to the 1841 population being 147, queried: "Where did they all live?"

In the spring of 1943 the late Sherman Taylor, son of the author, in England with his Regiment, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, visited Bremhill Vicarage and reported that the hamlet of Highway, with an area of 800 acres, was owned entirely by a Mr. Addington, all of the adult residents being his employees.

b. Reported by one of Jasper's great-grandsons, Harvey Franklin Taylor (1.7.1.2.).

having the Corn Laws repealed in 1848. Meanwhile, Jasper and his family were among the many who in 1842 left England to begin life over again in the New World.

With Jasper, economic reasons were supplemented by another motive, a motive of which he was acutely conscious—the desire for religious freedom. He was deeply interested in religion of the evangelical type which, in the form of Methodism, had been making inroads on the established religion, particularly in the humbler walks of life, and opened his house to Methodist meetings. This course met with the disfavor of his employer, the owner of Highway, who first tried to dissuade him, then offered him a bribe in the form of a suit of clothes, and finally threatened him with discharge. Though Jasper persisted in his course the threat was not carried out, but he finally left Highway, voluntarily, for Canada.

The voyage occupied six weeks. The family brought its own food and water for the passage.[c] The cost of passage to Montreal for the entire family of eleven was probably in the neighborhood of £24.[d] The party took a smaller boat at Montreal and proceeded westward up the St. Lawrence River. At Kingston, where the river widens into Lake Ontario, they stopped for several weeks.[e] Jobs were found for two of the boys, John (aged 15) on a Lake boat and James (aged 13) in a brewery. The others proceeded to Hamilton, whence they journeyed overland by hired wagons through Simcoe to Forestville, in the township of Charlotteville, county of Norfolk, Ontario.

c. In his later years James Taylor, at the time of this voyage 13 years of age, recounted how to him was assigned the task of keeping the water jugs from overturning during rough weather. This story was passed on by his son Wilson to John Wilson Taylor, husband of the author.

d. This figure is an estimate based on rates advertised ten years earlier (1832) in The Emigrant's Pocket Companion by Robt. Mudie. The rates quoted were:

Passage to Quebec or New Brunswick from London, ship owner supplying only water, fuel and bed places, inclusive of provisions £6, and without provisions £3; children under 14 half price, and under 7 one-third price. From Liverpool, Greenock, and ports of Ireland the price was less.

e. The family had two trunks of linens which they left behind at the place where they stayed at Kingston, probably to pay for their accommodation.

Forestville, which in 1853 had a population of 150, is located at the southern end of the township, about three miles from Lake Erie where the shore turns southward to form the eastern side of Turkey Point, a fertile region which had been settled in the 1790's.[f]

Jasper Taylor was not attracted primarily because of the fertility of the land. He was not a farmer. His interest was in finding a settled community in which he might ply his trade of carpentry and wagon making.[g] He was sufficiently successful at Forestville in the first two years of his stay that, in addition to supporting his family, he was able, on 9 October 1844, to purchase 3¼ acres of land, for which he paid £12.10s. This land he occupied while working at his trade.

The land, part of the south half of Lot 6, fronted on the first concession of Charlotteville township for 242 feet 10½ inches, and extended back to a mill pond along which the boundary ran for 211 feet 2½ inches. The depth of the lot on the west side was 655 feet 4½ inches. The east side, which was cut short by the mill pond, was 584 feet 1 inch. The deed was registered seven years later, 25 January 1851, and is recorded in the registry office at Simcoe, Ont.

The year in which Jasper purchased his plot of ground saw the family united again. John and James, who had been left behind at Kingston, finding life with their employers intolerable, left them and made their way by boat to Hamilton and on foot to Forestville to rejoin their parents. It is reported that the night before their arrival their mother had a vivid dream in which she saw the boys coming home, their possessions slung on sticks over their shoulders. The following day the dream came true.

f. The first log cabin in the Turkey Point area was built in 1793 by Frederick Mabee, United Empire Loyalist. See Ont. Hist. Scty. Papers & Records, Vol. I, 1899, p. 122. The lake front lands of Norfolk county were largely granted to United Empire Loyalists, while the lands to the rear were taken up by American and British emigrants. See Pioneer Sketches of the Long Point Settlement, 1898, by E. A. Owen.

g. The wagon shop of Jasper Taylor was still standing in 1946. Mr. Hoover, a resident of Forestville since 1879, was authority for the statement that the wagon shop had been moved around on the lot several times. In 1946 it stood back from the street, but it had been out on the front of the lot two or three times.

For the next nine years the Taylor family applied themselves to making a living and getting a start in the New World. Jasper taught at least three of his sons (Job, James, and Jesse) his own trade. John became a farmer and James a farmer and wagon maker. His daughter Rebecca married John M. Wilson in 1851. In 1853 Jasper's wife died. She was buried in the Methodist cemetery at Forestville.[h] Four years later he married Mary Bastedo,[i] a widow, who was born in 1793, and who survived him.

In 1860 Jasper sold to Curtis M. Petty ¼ acre of his land for $35. Eight years later he purchased 1 3/20 acres adjoining the original plot on the mill pond for $215. In 1872 he sold a lot 103 feet by 40 feet to Mary Matrow, wife of John Matrow, for $30. By this time all Jasper's sons and daughters had married, with the exception of the youngest daughter, Susanna, who removed to Port Rowan, Norfolk county, and supported herself by keeping a boarding house for students.

In 1874, having reached the age of 80, Jasper and his wife left their place in Forestville and went to live with Jasper's daughter, Mary Ann, who had married Charles Louks, and was residing on a farm three miles southwest of Walsingham Centre, in Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont.

On 30 January 1877 Jasper sold to Benjamin Cooper, blacksmith, 17 perches [perch—a square rod] of land for $300 and on 1 June 1877 he sold his original plot at Forestville to

j. An obituary printed in an unidentified church paper over the signature "E. Teskey" reads as follows:

"Jasper Taylor was born April 5th, 1794, in Highway, Wiltshire, England. His mind was early exercised on the subject of religion, but did not fully decide for God till he heard a Methodist preacher by the name of William Blackford preach from Proverbs III, 33, 'The curse of the Lord is in the house of the wicked; but he blesseth the habitation of the just'. He went home and told his wife that the curse of the Lord was in their house, and they then resolved to remove it by giving their hearts to God. Ever after his home was a Christian home, and for years a class met and the Gospel was preached in the home, greatly to the dislike of the man from whom he earned his daily bread, who first advised, then tried to bribe by offering him a new suit of clothes, and finally threatened him with discharge if he did not close his house against the meetings. The threat, however, was not carried into effect, and he remained in the same employ till he came to this country in 1842. He settled at Forestville, in the county of Norfolk, where for 34 years he was known as a kind and obliging neighbour, honest man and consistent Christian. In 1853 he was called to mourn the loss of the wife of his youth. In 1857 he married a Mrs. Bastedo, with whom he walked in the way to heaven for twenty years, who still lingers behind him, waiting till summoned higher. The last two years of his life were spent on the Port Rowan mission, at the house of his son-in-law, Brother Charles Louks, where, on the 14th of January 1878, after leading in family prayer, he went to his room and in fifteen minutes passed peacefully to his reward, in his 84th year.

"Father Taylor was always regular in his attendance at the house of God, never allowing visitors, or any other cause that would grieve Christ, to keep him from the place of worship. He was a man of strong faith. In conversation with his son-in-law the week before he departed, he said: 'I have been young, and now am old; yet have I never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread'. His daughter, who remembers him for fifty years, says: 'I never saw father angry'.

"He was spared to see all his children join the church of his choice, and many of his grandchildren; and one, Jasper Wilson, enter the Christian ministry. E. Teskey."

The inscription on his tombstone reads:

In Memory of Jasper Taylor who died Jan. 14, 1878
aged
83 yrs 10 mos & 20 d's
A faithful friend, a husband dear,
A tender parent lieth here.
Great is the loss we here sustain

JOB TAYLOR

1.1.

JOB TAYLOR (1821- ?). eldest son of Jasper and Anna (Whale) Taylor, was born at Highway, Wiltshire, England. He was baptized in the Church of England 9 September 1821. In 1842, when he was 21 years old, he accompanied his parents to Canada and with them resided at Forestville, on the first concession of the township of Charlotteville, Norfolk county, Ont.

Job learned the trade of wagon making from his father and on his arrival in Canada plied his trade with his father at Forestville.

On 9 February 1848 Job purchased from James Innes Lewis, for £20, 1¾ acres of land, part of the south half of Lot 6, Con. 1, Charlotteville. A fortnight later he sold part of this land to Peter Finch for £25. The next day he bought from Thomas Hartfield for £100 five acres in the south half of Lot 6, Con. 1, Charlotteville. In these land transactions Job was described as a wagon maker.[a]

On 28 December 1852 Job purchased from Thomas Arnold Barnum 3 roods and 30 perches of land, part of the south half of Lot 6, Con. 1, Charlotteville, for £50. The deed describes him as a carpenter.[b]

On 8 March 1853 Job, described as yeoman, with Charlotte his wife, sold to Peter Finch 17 perches of land, part of the south half of Lot 6, Con. 1, Charlotteville, for £12. On 3 November in the same year Job, described as "wagon maker otherwise known as carpenter and joiner", with Charlotte his wife, sold to Augustus Wilson, merchant of Simcoe, Norfolk county, Ont., for £50, the five acres he had purchased five years earlier. On 4 April 1855 Job sold to his brother Jesse, for £75, the 3 roods and 30 perches of land he had purchased a. In Canada Directory 1851, Supplement 1853, Job Taylor is listed in Forestville as carpenter and house painter.

b. Job, with his wife Charlotte and 2 young children, is given in the 1852 census records as residing in a 1½-story log cabin in Charlotteville.

in 1852. In 1861 Job and Charlotte resided in Houghton township, Norfolk county, in a one-story frame house, and in 1871 they resided at Port Burwell, Bayham township, Elgin county, Ont., with three children still at home: "Rosana, Carlus, and Lidia".[c]

Job is said to have lived with his son, Charles, near Springfield, Elgin county, Ont., for some time before his death, which was caused by cancer of the lip.

Job's wife, Charlotte, was born in 1827 in New Brunswick. She was a member of the Baptist Church.

a. The family of du Laux is one of the most ancient families in France. All families by the name of Loucks in America are of French Hugenot ancestry and all trace their origin to the band of Palatines who fled from the lower Rhine district in 1709 and 1710 and settled in the Hudson Valley. In all there were 9 emigrant Loucks families in America in 1710. The name is spelled in various ways but all belong to the one family. Some of the variants of the name are: Laux, Loux, Lauck, Laucks, Louks, Loucks, Locks, Louck, Loeck, and Locke. See Genealogy of the Loucks Family, 1940, by Edwin Merton McBrier.

The Palatinate mentioned by Mr. McBrier as having been the original home of the Loucks family is a territory of about 3,000 square miles on the west side of the Rhine which, until it became a part of Bavaria in 1777, existed as a separate state from the 10th century A.D. Besides its former capital, Heidelberg, its cities include Mainz, Mannheim, Worms, and Speyer.

A center of the Protestant faith and a refuge for French Huguenots from persecution after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes by King Louis XIV of France in 1685, it came under the rule of a Catholic prince in 1690. In 1709 a mass emigration of Protestants took place down the Rhine bound for Holland, England, and, if possible, America. The way had been shown the previous year when 52 Palatines, led by their Lutheran pastor, made their way to England and were settled in New York Province at the present site of Newburgh. About 2,730 more refugees from the Palatinate arrived in New York Province in 1710.

Annie Louks (1845- ?), daughter of Charles and Mary Ann (Taylor) Louks, was born about 1845 in Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont. She married Thomas Wilson.

Toronto, Ont. The registration was dated 9 March 1849 and the witness was Jeremiah Louks, who bought the southwest quarter of the same lot on the same day Charles purchased his 50 acres.

Charles appears to have leased part of Lot 9, Con. 3, adjoining his own lot, since the agricultural census of 1852 lists him as residing on Lot 9 and holding 150 acres, 80 under cultivation and 70 wild or wooded. In that year his land produced: 40 bu. barley, 140 bu. oats, 50 bu. wheat, 60 bu. potatoes, 20 tons hay, 30 lbs. wool, 150 bu. cabbages, 60 lbs. maple sugar, 12 yds. of fulled cloth, and 28 yds. of flannel.

He was brought up by a German family who, though living four miles away, were the nearest neighbors in that sparsely settled region. The name Dafoe is believed to have been corrupted to Dafoot when the child's teacher so transliterated the name as pronounced by his German foster-parents. In his later years he established contact with relatives by the name of Dafoe, who had settled around the Bay of Quinte, an arm of Lake Ontario.

Peter Carpenter Dafoot was born 14 January 1816 and died August 1909 at the age of 92. He was a Baptist, the first home missionary in the State of Michigan. JOHN TAYLOR

JOHN TAYLOR (1827-1902), son of Jasper and Anna (Whale) Taylor, was born 2 March 1827 at Highway, Wiltshire, England, and was baptized in the Church of England 1 April 1827. In 1842 he went from England to Canada with his parents. With his 13-year-old brother, James, he remained at Kingston, Ont., while the rest of the family, after a short stay in Kingston, proceeded westward to Forestville, Norfolk county. He got a job on a Lake boat, and his brother James was bound out to a brewer. The boys were treated badly by their employers, receiving poor food, few comforts, and little pay. It is said that they did not know how to write and that the employers would write reassuringly to the parents about them. At the end of two years the boys ran away and went by boat to Hamilton, from which point they walked the remaining 50 or more miles to Forestville, south of Simcoe, Norfolk county, Ont. It is significant that John in later years referred to his having come to Canada at the age of 17, the year of his reunion with his parents in Forestville.

In the course of their 50-mile walk the boys stopped overnight at an inn, over the protest of one who did not want to stop because there were colored people there. They asked the proprietor how far it was to Simcoe and to their great joy the proprietor replied "This is Simcoe". When they got home they were told that their mother the night before had seen them in a dream walking in with their possessions carried on sticks slung over their shoulders, in the manner in which they actually did arrive.

John went to school in Canada for three winters, two months at a time. He read a great deal, and was described as rather a silent man and very religious. He had a kindly disposition and a keen sense of humor.

John spent his adult life farming in Norfolk county. On 3 October 1855 he married Mary Ann Backhouse.[a] The ceremony was performed by Rev. Matthew Swann, minister of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Canada. Mary Ann was born in 1830, daughter of William and Hannah (McMichael)[b] Backhouse, who resided on Lot 23, Con. 2, Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont.

John farmed, successively, in Walsingham township; in Woodhouse township, where his four children were born; and was on a farm near Vittoria, where the grasshoppers for three years in succession destroyed his crops. About 1890 he moved to a farm in Lynn Valley near Simcoe, and lived there until 1895. In that year his daughter, Annie, married, and he went to live with her in Simcoe, where he died in 1902.

Mary Ann died 2 July 1875 and was buried in the Newkirk cemetery, near St. Williams, Ont., within sight of the home where she was born. John also was buried in the Newkirk cemetery.[c]

When he had been in Canada three years he went on horseback fifty miles to London, Ont., to get a marriage license and, 20 November 1857, at his sister's home in Bosanquet township, Lambton county, Ont., he married the then 16-year-old Martha Gott (see note b). Mr. Rowe's sister in Bosanquet was Lydia (Rowe) Crone, the only other one of the Rowe family to come to Canada. Both George and Martha were gifted musically. They had 11 children, all of whom exhibited musical talent. George and Martha were Baptists, as was one of their sons. Most of the other children belonged to the Methodist Church. Lyle Rowe (1891-), son of Arthur and Mary (Taylor) Rowe, was born in 1891 at Thamesville, Kent county, Ont. He married Nellie ———, from whom he was divorced. He resided at Bradford, Pa., and (1948) at 906 Irvin St., Plymouth, Mich. He was a carpenter. He had no children.

John William Taylor (1862-), twin of Robert, was born 10 June 1862, son of John and Mary Ann (Backhouse) Taylor of Woodhouse township, Norfolk county, Ont.

John attended the country school in School Section No. 3 of Woodhouse township. He attended the Simcoe high school, walking the four miles there and back each day. For one winter he attended the Port Rowan high school, staying with his aunt Susan Taylor (1.9.). Upon graduation from high school, he taught school for two years at Port Ryerse, a village on Lake Erie about five miles from Simcoe. In October 1884 he resigned from his school and went to Michigan to begin training for what he had decided was his calling—ministry in the Methodist Church, the denomination in which he had been brought up. He was appointed to a little church at Otsego Lake in northern Michigan, a church having a membership of thirty women and no men. While at Otsego he took his conference course of four years' study, and was ordained in the year 1889. He graduated in 1892 from the Garrett Bible Institute, Evanston, Ill., with the degree of B.D. His first appointment after leaving Evanston was at Laramie, Wyoming. While there he obtained the degree of M.A. from the University of Wyoming. His subsequent pastorates were at Salt Lake City, Utah; Ogden, Utah; Vermillion, S. D.; Aberdeen, S. D.; Northfield, Minn.; and Hamline Church, St. Paul, Minn., of which church he was made minister emeritus 31 March 1946.

Dr. Taylor was district superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Minnesota for 11 years (1914-1925). He received the degree of doctor of divinity from Dakota Wesleyan University. He retired in 1935 after 51 years in the active ministry and resided at 1662 Englewood Ave., St. Paul, Minn.

On the occasion of his retirement from the active ministry, Bishop Thomas Nicholson wrote: "I have known Dr. Taylor for most of the period of his ministry. As a student, he was industrious and apt. He always carried himself with dignity but without undue reserve. He was always devoted to the work of the Kingdom of God, was a faithful pastor, a man of affairs and one of our most forceful and able preachers. He has filled a long line of prominent pulpits, some of them among the most responsible of the Church. So far as I know he has never made even a partial failure anywhere. His work has been outstanding, his record clean, his ministry fruitful and his devotion in the Church and to our Lord Savior complete."

On 29 November 1887 he married Annie Rebecca Bennett, who was born 21 February 1865, daughter of Aaron and Amy Bennett, who resided on a farm three miles from St. Williams, Norfolk county, Ont.

Columbia, where he took up land at Bridesville and taught school while farming. In British Columbia he married Grace Gilroy, of Scottish parentage.

Robert contracted tuberculosis and his wife ran the farm during his illness. On New Year's Day 1924, while doing farm work, Grace broke her leg. She managed to get to the house and her husband set out to walk to the nearest neighbor, a mile away, for help. He was so weak he would walk a short distance, then lie in the snow to rest. He died 5 May 1924 in Grand Forks, B.C., where he was buried.

Grace resided for about 15 years at the home of Mrs. Stark in Penticton, B.C. Becoming ill, she removed to the home of her sister, Mrs. Walker, of Ladysmith, B.C. (Rural Route No. 1), where she died 13 October 1946. They had no children.

JAMES TAYLOR

JAMES TAYLOR (1829-1895), son of Jasper and Anna (Whale) Taylor, was born 22 March 1829 in England. He was baptized in the Church of England 3 May 1829 at Highway, Wiltshire. When James was 13 years old he went to Canada with his parents.[a] With his 15-year-old brother, John, he remained at Kingston, Ont., while the rest of the family, after a short stay in Kingston, proceeded westward to Forestville, Norfolk county, Ont.[b]

Two years later James rejoined his parents and soon thereafter he was bound out to Alexander Butler Hutchinson, farmer of Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont. James was treated as a son by this family and remained in their employ until 1858, when he married Matilda Montrose.[c] c. It is said that James and auburn-haired Matilda fell in love at first sight. They met at a quilting bee at the home of Alexander Butler Hutchinson, whose wife, Phoebe, daughter of Frances (Montross) Price, was first cousin of Matilda's foster-father, Wilson Montross.

James and Matilda at first resided on a farm in De

Matilda was born 12 March 1836 and died 26 August 1878 (see note h below). She was brought up in the family of Wilson and Harriet Ann (Dustin) Montross of St. Williams, a village on the border of Charlotteville and Walsingham townships, Norfolk county, Ont. Matilda was born about four months after the date of the marriage bond of Wilson and Harriet Ann (16 November 1835) and was the daughter of Levi Montrose (Montross), uncle of Wilson, to whom Levi devised six acres of land in 1847.

The statement that Matilda was daughter of Levi Montrose (1768-1855) rests on the word of her son Wilson, a man of meticulous accuracy and scientific training, who stated without hint of doubt to his wife and to his eldest son that Levi Montrose was her father. No information as to her paternity was given to any other of her children or her foster-parents' children so far as could be ascertained from their descendants living in 1948, although it was known in the family that Matilda was not a child of Wilson and Harriet Ann. Matilda's daughter Nellie told her son Arthur that Matilda was treated harshly by her foster-mother, as she was not wanted in the family.

Matilda's maternity rests on conjecture, the most plausible view being that her mother was Eliza Ann Johnson (Feb. 9, 1805-Nov. 27, 1884), who lived in the household of Levi Montross and was 30 years of age in 1835. In his will Levi made provision for the life-long support of Eliza Ann, and she was buried on his left, with Blaquiere's Hollow,[d] Walsingham township. For a short time in 1864 the family lived at Port Burwell, Elgin county, Ont., where their daughter Nellie was born. On 19 April 1865 James purchased 62½ acres of land, the east half of Lot 8, south of the Lake road, Houghton township, Norfolk county, Ont., near Houghton Centre on the shore of Lake Erie. The purchase price was $1,000, which he paid by $100 down and a 7% mortgage, the unpaid balance of which ($300) was retired 6 January 1869 by a new 5-year mortgage for $315 at 8%. This mortgage was discharged 2 April 1874, but by a mortgage in a larger amount—$500 at 8%. The need for ready cash arose when tragedy struck the family early that year.

When felling a tree on a wood-lot near St. Williams, James had one of his legs crushed. Resourceful, he saved his own life by using a strap as a tourniquet. His cries attracted the attention of Joseph Parsons and William Price, who were working not far away. They sent to Port Rowan for a doctor and drove James home. Passing the school, they told the Taylor boys to come home, as their father had been hurt. The doctor one space intervening, in the Johnson cemetery at St. Williams, his wife Ann Maria (1770-1841) being buried on his right. Arthur Harris, son of Matilda's daughter Nellie, stated that his mother told him Matilda was an illegitimate child. He added that he gathered that Matilda's mother was a servant girl.

Levi was eldest son of Peter Montross (1742-1833), United Empire Loyalist, and his wife, Leah Mabee, who went as refugees from New York State to New Brunswick at the close of the Revolutionary War and migrated from New Brunswick to Long Point Settlement, Norfolk county, Ont., in 1797. Peter Montross was 5th in line of descent from Harmen Janszen Van Leneps, Dutch settler from Hesse, who migrated to New Amsterdam (now New York) and married there in 1650. His son Jan Harmse (bp. 1658-d. 1740) had a son Harmen (bp. 1684), who was known by the name Montrass (Montross). Harmen Montross had 4 sons, one of whom, Peter (bp. 6 March 1715 as Petrus Montras), was the father of Peter the Loyalist. (Based on The Colonial Families of Philipsburgh, N. Y., by Grenville C. Mackenzie, manuscript in library of White Plains Historical Association, White Plains, N. Y.) The Loyalist Peter used the spelling Montross but his descendants, for the most part, called themselves Montrose.

d. At Big Creek, five or six miles west of St. Williams, Norfolk county. The area was named for De Blaquiere, who had a mill there and three or four miles of railway up into the woods. See Page Historical Atlas of Norfolk County, pub. 1877. In this neighborhood lived the Becker family. The birth of Matilda's second son was attended by the wife of Jeremiah Becker, Abigail (1831-1905), heroine of the rescue of 7 shipwrecked sailors from the schooner "Conductor" in a storm on Lake Erie in November 1853. The rescue took place while her husband was on a four-day trip to Port Rowan to dispose of pelts and bring back supplies. See Niagara Historical Society Publications, Vol. 32, edited by Lt. Col. E. A. Cruikshank.

pronounced that James's leg had to be amputated, but refused to operate until his fee of $100 was guaranteed. The mortgage for $315 was replaced by the $500 mortgage as a result.

Mr. Taylor at first attempted to manage the farm with the help of his two teen-age sons. This proving impracticable, on 3 April 1877 he sold the farm (selling price $1,800) and moved into Port Burwell.

At Port Burwell a second calamity befell the family. Matilda contracted yellow fever, believed brought into Port Burwell by the Lake boats, and died 26 August 1878. She was buried in a small cemetery north of the village.

Thereafter the family was kept together only with the greatest difficulty. The eldest daughter, 14 years of age at the time of her mother's death, became her father's housekeeper. The sons worked for farmers in the neighborhood and contributed to the support of the family. "Uncle Jim", as he was called, became a familiar figure in the township, driving from farm to farm selling tinware.

James moved back to Houghton Centre and was residing there on 4 June 1884 when he married Mrs. Rachel Robbins,[e] of Houghton township. This marriage was not a happy one and, after about three years, Rachel left him. During this time he lived on a rented four-acre place, the northwest corner of the lot whose east half had been his old farm.

On 26 May 1888 James's second son, Wilson, purchased[f] this tract for his father. On this small acreage James resided until December 1893, when he went to live with his daughter Minnie (Mrs. Edward Francis) of Houghton township, at whose home he died 28 April 1895. His death came suddenly, apparently through heart failure. The previous evening he had been playing on the floor with his year-old grandson, Leslie Harris, then visiting his aunt. In the night Edward Francis,

e. Mrs. Robbins was born in 1828, daughter of Henry and Abigail Dell of Wainfleet township, Welland county, Ont. The marriage was performed at Houghton Centre by Rev. Ransom Bridgman in the presence of Ella Bridgman. The marriage certificate describes James and Rachel as members of the Methodist Church.

hearing a noise as if James were in a nightmare, entered his room to find that he had died.

James was short of stature. Mild-mannered, he nevertheless had strong convictions on the importance of honesty and faithful performance of duty—characteristics which appear from a narrative written years later by his son Wilson. In an account of a raccoon hunt which took place at Houghton about 1872 Wilson related that, although James permitted his two sons to participate in what turned out to be an all-night hunt, he insisted on their putting in a full day at the plow on their return. The narrative told of the misgivings of Wilson, then 11 or 12 years of age, at taking, during the hunt, melons and potatoes from a neighbor's field for a midnight lunch, adding that his father would not have permitted his sons to go if he had thought they would have joined in the "theft". Although he farmed during most of his life, James was also a wagon maker.

James was buried in the Anglican church cemetery[g] at Jacksonburg, 1½ miles east of Houghton Centre, the Methodist church to which he belonged having no cemetery connected with it. The body of his first wife, Matilda, was brought from Port Burwell and reinterred[h] beside her husband.

Wellington Taylor (1859-1909), son of James and Matilda (Montrose) Taylor, was born 3 April 1859 in Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont. He was a highly skilled carpenter and cabinet maker. He resided at Clear Creek, in Houghton township, Norfolk county; at Sparta in Elgin county; at Union in Elgin county; at Clear Creek again; moved to Vittoria in Charlotteville township, Norfolk county, in 1896; and to Hespeler, Waterloo county, in 1905, where he died 16 February 1909.

When the family resided in Sparta there was only a Baptist church there, so they attended the Baptist church. In Union, they attended the Baptist church in the morning and the Methodist church in the afternoon.

On 6 October 1880 Wellington married Frances Louch, who was born 25 January 1859, daughter of John and Frances Louch[a] of Cultus, Houghton township. Frances died 13 December 1940 at Hespeler, Ont., where both she and her husband were buried.

found to show Matilda's death date as 25 August (not 26 August, as on the tombstone) and age as 43 years, 6 months and 11 days, making her birth date 14 February 1835 (not 12 March 1836, as on the tombstone). The name plate was removed from the coffin and (1948) was in possession of Arthur Harris (1.5.3.1.), grandson of Matilda. The dates on the tombstone are believed to be correct because of (1) the carefulness of Wilson Taylor, who arranged for the reinterment, (2) the fact that the name plate was removed, and (3) evidence of the census of 1852, which states that Matilda Montrose would be 17 at her next birthday, making her 16 in the spring of 1852 (enumerator's report turned in May 21, 1852).

Wilson Taylor (1861-1923), son of James and Matilda (Montrose) Taylor, was born 16 January 1861 at De Blaquiere's Hollow, Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont. The family later moved to a farm in Houghton township, Norfolk county, on the north shore of Lake Erie seven miles east of Port Burwell. When Wilson was 13 years of age, his father lost his leg in an accident. Wilson was obliged to leave school and assist in supporting the family, which included four girls younger than himself. After two years his father sold the farm and the family moved to Port Burwell. His mother died two years later (1878). The next year Wilson went back to school, at Vienna, Elgin county, and passed the high school entrance examination in July 1880. By dint of working as a farm laborer and conserving his money by ingenious economies, he was able to attend high school at Aylmer, Ont., beginning in January 1881. He completed the course in July of the same year, prior to which, on petition of the students to the school board, he was temporarily in charge of the school. Obtaining his professional teacher's certificate by the end of the year, he taught for several months in a country public school and, in September, became a teacher in the Bothwell (Kent county) public school, of which he later was made principal. While at Bothwell Wilson conducted in the local newspaper a column consisting of miscellaneous comments and verse.

In 1884 he attended Ingersoll high school, where his studies included a course in mathematics covering much of the work offered in the first two years of university. Passing the examination in July, he attended the Toronto Normal School for the autumn term, winning the Governor-General's gold medal for proficiency in teaching.

In January 1885 Wilson was appointed to the staff of the Ingersoll high school at a salary of $75 a month. On 20 December 1886 he married Nancy Marilla Livingston[a] (Mar. 11, 1861-Sept. 15, 1942), a pupil at the high school. He then began extramural study to qualify for examinations in mathematics at the University of Toronto. He took the regular yearly examinations in 1888, 1889, and 1890 and ranked among the top three in the university each year despite the handicap of nonattendance. He received his B. A. degree in 1892.

Meanwhile he had continued to contribute toward the support of his crippled father and the younger members of the family. In 1888 he purchased for $200 a 4-acre tract for them.[b] From his systematically kept accounts it appears that by June 1890 he had saved from his salary and occasional outside earnings over $500 in cash, despite the fact that he contributed one-tenth of his gross earnings each year to the Methodist Church.

Wilson left Ingersoll in the summer of 1890 to accept a position teaching mathematics at Stratford, Ont., at $1,000 a year. Three years later he went as mathematical master to the collegiate institute at Chatham, Ont., at a salary of $1,200 a year, and he continued to teach in Chatham until 31 January 1913.

In 1898 he published a textbook Principles of Arithmetic, but its philosophic approach to the subject did not commend itself to the Ontario Minister of Education and it was never authorized as a public school textbook, although it was authorized in teacher-training schools. The venture netted him a slight loss. Meanwhile he became prominent in the work of the Methodist Church in the city. He frequently served as a lay preacher and took the platform in behalf of proposed laws to abolish the sale of liquor and prohibit Sunday labor. For several years he was city auditor.

In the summer of 1912 he established a residence in Toronto, where his four surviving children were studying, and at the end of the year accepted a position in the Peterborough collegiate institute, from which in 1914 he went to the St. Catharines collegiate institute. In St. Catharines he became interested in the study of surface tension of liquids and this led to a grant in 1919 of $500 from the Honorary Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial Research of Canada to enable him to pursue the research at the University of Toronto. Through the interest and financial support of Lt.-Col. R. W. Leonard, mining engineer and operator, he was enabled to continue this work until his death.

He demonstrated that, if a drop of water is divided into smaller and smaller particles until each is of molecular dimension, the total surface energy, increasing proportionately to the total increase of surface, has thereby increased by an amount which equals the heat of vaporization, or latent heat of steam. He regarded this discovery as of fundamental importance and inferred that there is a "surface force" acting about all liquids even when existing as molecules. After his death his published and unpublished researches were collected in a memorial volume published by the University of Toronto in 1925 under the title A New View of Surface Forces.

As a by-product of his research, he devised a method of treating hardwood logs to prevent them in large measure from becoming waterlogged, thus cutting loss from sinking as the logs are floated from forest to mill. He secured Canadian Patent No. 212,551 (U. S. No. 1,435,031, Nov. 7, 1922) for the process and was about to engage in its large scale application under a contract with a lumber firm when his work was cut short by death.

Wilson Taylor combined a keen scientific mind with a religious faith which amounted to an almost literal though somewhat rationalized belief in the scriptures. He conceived of his pedagogical, scientific, and civic work as part of his religious duty. Although this characteristic at times excited antagonism, it also created respect and lent energy to execution. He was an inspiring teacher, particularly for the more gifted students. In addition, he was a skilled artisan, constructing most of his own scientific apparatus, and at various times throughout his life he turned his energies to painting and to the study of music, history, literature, Greek, and Latin.

He died in Toronto 3 October 1923 and was buried in the Maple Leaf cemetery at Chatham, Ont., where his wife was later buried.

Sherman Taylor (1924-1944), son of John Wilson and Eva Mills (Lee) Taylor, was born 3 September 1924 at Buffalo, N. Y. He attended the Bethesda-Chevy Chase high school of Bethesda, Maryland, and the Woodrow Wilson high school of Washington, D. C., where his chief interests were languages, government, debating, and cadet work.

Impatient at the delay in American entry into World War II, he went to Toronto, Ont., in the summer of 1941 at the end of his junior year in high school. He tried to enlist but was rejected because he was under age. He stayed in Toronto and worked in a factory, training evenings and Sundays with the 2nd Battalion (Militia) of the Royal Regiment of Canada. In the summer of 1942 he worked as batman at Niagara-on-the-Lake with, in succession, the 2nd Field Squadron (Toronto), the 1st Field Squadron (Hamilton), and the 3rd Battalion, Royal Canadian Engineers.

On 1 September 1942, shortly before his 18th birthday, Sherman entered the Canadian Army, enlisting at Winnipeg, Man., then the headquarters of Canada's famous infantry regiment, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. He travelled there at his own expense to assure his assignment to this regiment. He was stationed for training successively at Fort Osborne, Portage-la-Prairie, and Shilo Camp, all in Manitoba. He was certified as a fully proficient soldier on 1 January 1943 and on 13 January was assigned to the "Princess Pats", as the regiment of his choice was popularly known. He was sent overseas 19 March 1943 and arrived in England 1 April 1943.

In England he was stationed for a month with No. 1 Canadian Infantry Reinforcement Unit, and in June he was with his regiment at Blantyre, Scotland.

The Princess Pats became part of the 1st Canadian Division which, as part of the Allied forces invading Sicily, embarked in June and landed on the Pachino beaches of Sicily on the morning of 10 July 1943. During the next four weeks the Canadians fought their way some 250 miles across Sicily to the slopes of Mt. Etna. The Pats distinguished themselves in the taking of Leonforte on July 22 and Agira on July 28. Early in August Sherman was stricken with appendicitis and was flown to the 99th General Hospital of the British North Africa forces. In the late autumn he rejoined his regiment, then part of the British Eighth Army facing the German Army on the Adriatic coast near Ortona.

Beginning in April 1944 his unit was given intensive training to carry out an assault delivered May 23 against the Hitler Line at a point near Pontecorvo. The Princess Pats, flanked by Seaforth Highlanders and others, advanced across a wide valley under smoke screen protection to attack three lines of Germans in the hills opposite, which were fortified by mines and 88-mm. turreted guns dismounted from tanks and surrounded by 4-foot concrete walls, many of which remained intact despite a five-hour bombardment by artillery and aircraft. When the Canadian troops were half way across the valley, waist high in standing wheat, the wind shifted and dissipated the smoke screen, subjecting the troops to fire from the German 88-mm. guns and small arms. When the smoke screen was dissipated all but 5 of 56 tanks massed by an Irish unit to support the advance were destroyed by German fire before they could get within range of the German guns. Nevertheless the Canadians advanced where advance seemed impossible and infiltrated the first two lines. The Germans then withdrew. Of 400 Princess Pats men in combat, 68 were killed, about 272 were wounded and some were captured, leaving not more than one-eighth of their number.

A dispatch written by Doug How for the Canadian Press and datelined Italy under the heading "Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers All Gone, Pats Privates Won Battle" described the battle in the following words:

"For hours and even days nobody knew the full story of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry on May 23 when they assaulted the Hitler Line. They only knew that men had fallen until the ground seemed littered with them, that others went on until they reached their objectives, then fought for hours. Action reduced their ranks as they have never been reduced in this war and probably seldom in the last. . . . . The Hitler Line loomed up like an impregnable steel wall. Machine gun posts bristled behind barbed wire strung with mines. Pillboxes mounted in concrete and steel controlled the approaches. The long barrels of 75 and 88-mm. guns jutted out from solid emplacements. An anti-tank ditch ran across the face of the Line, which in some places was 400 yards deep, in others 1,000.

"The advance began at dawn, through fields that stood waist high in wet grain that hid the enemy in the fog and mist of an Italian morning and the smoke of action, whose trees gave a leafy cover to snipers who lurked in them, and whose soil was broken for hours by hundreds of German mortar and artillery shells.

"Two companies began the assault and an hour and a half later the few privates still able to advance were on their objective, the road that links Pontecorvo and Aquino in the Liri Valley. All their officers and all their non-commissioned officers had been either killed or wounded.

"One after another the officers fell from the ranks of the company that started out behind the other two. All through the day mortar and artillery fire fell ceaselessly. Even the company in reserve suffered so heavily that all its officers were either wounded or killed. Sergeants found themselves company commanders, and privates rallied small groups and proved themselves capable leaders in the crisis. When finally dusk and darkness came and a fresh advance was made on their flank, the Pats that could withdrew, but men kept straggling back for hours after. Patrols went out to seek the wounded and the stranded, but the patrols didn't come back because the Hitler Line was still alive with snipers and guns. Men died with a courage that was magnificent, advanced when advance seemed impossible, held for hours on the objective that hundreds started for and dozens reached. . . . Nevertheless in the morning fresh Canadian armor was pouring through the hole this and other battalions had driven into the Hitler Line. . . The Hitler Line was broken, and the victorious Allied armies pressed forward toward Rome and the Valley of the Po."

Sherman was killed in this bloody battle. He was hit by shrapnel. Sergeant Armstrong helped carry his body from the battlefield, and Capt. J. R. Roensgen, M. C., oversaw the temporary burial near by. A year later his body was reinterred in the military cemetery at Cassino, Italy, in Plot 9, Row C, No. 11.[a]

In Bethesda-Chevy Chase high school Sherman's name is one of 43 on a bronze tablet in memory of former students whose lives were sacrificed in World War II. He is one of 63 memorialized in Woodrow Wilson high school in Washington, D. C., and a bronze memorial plate has been placed on the entrance marker at Woodhaven, Maryland, which was his home. His name is listed in the Archives of Maryland among those who gave their lives in World War II, and is inscribed in the Golden Book of Remembrance deposited in Toronto's memorial to her sons and daughters who gave their lives in the cause of freedom during the war 1939-1945.

The Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry
23rd May 1944 Age 19
Beloved son of John Wilson and Eva Mills (Lee) Taylor of Bethesda, Maryland

Sherman from earliest childhood was self-reliant and trustworthy. Both in intellect and character he exhibited maturity much beyond his years. His amusements had a wide range—sometimes close to earth (as in helping to plan and execute the landscaping of his parents' home), frequently scientific (as in making a collection of rocks, carefully labelled as in a museum), sometimes linguistic (as in his extra-curricular study of the Spanish and Russian languages), but most frequently having an international angle (as in the construction of colored charts showing military and naval strength of leading countries or in the painting of flags of merchant ships which he observed passing the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor.) He was fond of camping and of hiking expeditions. He had a discriminating taste for music and spent many hours listening to recordings of the world's great composers. In his early teens he used his allowance to send contributions to China after Japan's war on that country had begun. While in North Africa he sent home for a copy of Karl Marx's Capital, which he had not been able to find in Algiers.

By nature not gregarious, Sherman nevertheless joined the Army to do his part in the struggle of the democracies against Fascism. In his last letter to his parents, written nine days before the fateful morning of 23 May 1944, he said: "If I could knock out one fascist for every parcel you send, it would be very good indeed."

Alfred Livingston Taylor (1893-1918), son of Wilson and Nancy Marilla (Livingston) Taylor, was born at Chatham, Ont., 9 December 1893. He graduated from the collegiate institute in Chatham, Ont., and from the University of Toronto in absentia in 1916 (being at that time on active military duty) with the degree of B.A. in English and history.

Fred enlisted in the Canadian Army in World War I on 17 February 1916 and was assigned to the 182nd Battalion of Ontario county. He went overseas with the 116th Battalion, arriving in England 31 July 1916 and in France 29 March 1917. He had the rank of corporal. The 116th Battalion was attached to the 4th Division when it went into action. Fred was killed 28 August 1918 while serving with the 116th, which was engaged in the battle of Scarpe, on the Arras front, France. Information was received that his body had been buried south-east of Boiry, Notre Dame, France, but it later proved impossible to locate and register the grave. Consequently the Canadian Government caused his name to be inscribed on the Vimy Memorial erected at Vimy Ridge, France, to commemorate those members of the Canadian forces who fell in France and whose graves are unknown.

Ross Malcolm Taylor (1895-1916), son of Wilson and Nancy Marilla (Livingston) Taylor, was born 29 December 1895 at Chatham, Ont. He attended the collegiate institute at Chatham, and in the autumn of 1912 enrolled at Victoria College, University of Toronto, in the department of chemistry and mineralogy. On entrance to university he had won the Prince of Wales scholarship for first place in general proficiency in competitive examinations.

REBECCA TAYLOR

1.6.

REBECCA TAYLOR (1830-1888), daughter of Jasper and Anna (Whale) Taylor, was born 26 December 1830 at Highway, Wiltshire, England. She was baptized in the Church of England at Highway 7 March 1833. She accompanied her parents to Canada in 1842 and resided with them at Forestville, Norfolk county, Ont.

On 5 February 1851 Rebecca married John M. Wilson, who was born 6 May 1826 in County Armagh, Ireland, son of John and Jane (Craig) Wilson. John M. Wilson went to Canada in 1847 with his parents, who died in Montreal of "ship-fever"[a] on their arrival in Canada from their native Ireland.

After their marriage John and Rebecca lived at Simcoe, Ont., then removed to a farm[b] in Middleton township, Norfolk county. They resided in Middleton until 1881, in which year they moved to Moore township, near Brigden in the county of Lambton, Ont. Mr. Wilson died of pneumonia 7 March 1884 and was buried at Bradshaw, near Brigden.

Mr. Wilson was a very religious man. His grandchildren related that it was his custom to sing hymns on the way home

a. Typhus fever. See Appendix 11—Wilson Family, note a.

b. The farm on which he resided after leaving Simcoe is said to have been Lot 21, Con. 3, Middleton township, Norfolk county, Ont., a farm occupied in 1946 by a Polish family named Bartch. On 27 April 1874 (the year in which his youngest child was born) Mr. Wilson received a Crown grant of 100 acres, the west half of Lot 22, Con. 3, Middleton. In the same year he mortgaged this land for $1,000. This was followed by other loans until 7 September 1881 the then mortgage of $7,003.50 was foreclosed. Mr. Wilson appears to have had considerable hard luck in his farming operations. Next to his farm was an unoccupied tract belonging to the Canada Land Company and from this refuge wild animals depredated his farmyard. One year his few cattle all died. When a grasshopper scourge destroyed all his grain crops he moved to Moore township, Lambton county, where land was being opened up for settlement.

from prayer meeting, walking alone on one side of the country road, the younger people walking on the other. A strong advocate of "temperance", he was among those early farmers who refused to provide liquor for the harvesters. He was instrumental in the building of the Methodist church at Middleton, which church was still (1948) being used for Sunday services.

Rebecca died of a heart attack 15 March 1888 at the residence of her eldest son at Watford, Ont., and was buried beside her husband at Bradshaw.

John Irvine McNiece was born in Ireland in 1815 and migrated to Kingston, Ont., with his parents when he was 14 years old. His parents died within a year of each other, of cholera. John Irvine as a young man was a friend of Sir John A. MacDonald, Canadian statesman and, with the exception of one four-year term, prime minister of Canada from 1857 to 1891.

John Irvine married (1) a daughter of Joseph Franklin, Jr. (see Appendix 6—Franklin Family). They resided in Kingston and had two children: Victoria and Albert. Mrs. McNiece was taken ill, and the family returned to her parents' home, eight miles from Kingston, where she died.

John Irvine married (2) Elizabeth Jane Franklin, who was born in 1824. She was niece of his first wife and had been brought up in the home of her grandparents. She had taken care of Victoria and Albert when they lost their mother and was very devoted to them. John Irvine and Elizabeth Jane moved to a farm 1½ miles from the Joseph Franklin farm. Here four of their children were born. Then they moved to a large farm a short distance away where they were nearer to a school, and on this farm their other four children were born. Their last move was in 1870 to a farm at Black Creek (now Bradshaw), Sombra township, Lambton county, Ont. Here Mr. McNiece's sons cut logs, built a house, and cleared the land. One of the sons, Henry Franklin McNiece, cut the first log from the land cleared for the erection of the Methodist church at Bradshaw.

Mr. McNiece inherited considerable money from his first wife but was reputed to have been not particularly frugal nor far-sighted in his financial affairs. He appears to have been sports-loving, his family recalling his red hunting coat always hanging conveniently on the wall. He died in 1888 and was buried at Bradshaw. Elizabeth Jane spent her later years in the home of her son Henry Franklin, near Byron, Middlesex county, Ont. A few months before she died she went to spend the winter with her daughter Isabella (Mrs. Thomas Williams) at London, Ont., where she passed away in the spring of 1915, old age being given as the cause of her death. She was buried in the Woodland cemetery at London, Ont.

The children of John Irvine McNiece were:

Middlesex county, Ont. They were members of the Methodist Church. Maria died 12 May 1918 and her husband died 17 October 1923. Both were buried in the Woodland cemetery at London, Ont.

In 1884 Jesse, described as a carpenter of Port Rowan, widower, bought a half interest in part of Lot 16, Con. A, Walsingham, in Port Rowan, 7/8 acre, and sold out his interest in 1885.

In 1888 Jesse took his son Walter to Tennessee for his health, visiting in Maryville, Tenn., with the Johnson family, old friends and neighbors from Canada. Leaving Walter at Knoxville, Jesse went on to California where 16 February 1889 he purchased property on Button St., Santa Cruz, on which he built a house. In the same year he married Ellen Johnson, sister of Myron F. Johnson of Maryville, Tenn., and on 29 December 1890 he conveyed this property to her.[b]

In Santa Cruz Jesse worked as a carpenter and cabinet maker. In the autumn of 1894 he became ill and unable to work and, when thought to be recovering, died suddenly of a heart attack, at the age of 61. After his death Ellen (Johnson) Taylor under date of 3 January 1895 wrote to his daughters: "I took the tenderest care of him and tried so hard to keep him, but it was not to be. I think he was the noblest man I ever knew. We laid him to rest on a pretty, sunny slope, facing the setting sun, and left him covered with beautiful flowers."

b. In 1900 Ellen (Johnson) Taylor conveyed this property to John M. and Catherine McCaskill, whose daughter Annie M. was the owner in 1946. On 6 January 1898 Ellen (Johnson) Taylor and her brother Myron lived at 472 Ocean St., Santa Cruz. Search of the Santa Cruz County Directory for 1910-11 disclosed in Santa Cruz neither the name of Ellen J. Taylor nor of Myron F. Johnson.

In 1917 he left high school to enlist in the Canadian Army, but was rejected because of his heart. Rather than return to high school he went to Nashville, Tenn., where his uncle Walter Taylor was living, and tried to enlist in the American Army. He was rejected there also. He worked in Ontario and in the Canadian West until 1921, when he went to Chicago and studied at the Coyne Trade and Engineering School. Returning to Ontario he worked as an electrician for the Ontario Hydro-electric Power Commission, but soon removed to Chicago, where he worked with the Cooper Hewitt Electric Company (later called General Electric Vapor Lamp Company) as service man. While with this Company Myron learned industrial illumination, and when the Company was consolidated with the incandescent lamp department of the General Electric Company he was employed by it as mercury vapor specialist.

William Irvin Overholt was son of Henry and Elizabeth (Barry) Overholt, and was born 7 February 1868 at Dunnville, where for 35 years he was foreman of the brushing department of the Monarch Knitting Company. He died in Toronto, Ont., 19 March 1936 and was buried at Dunnville. The Overholt family went to Canada from Pennsylvania.

Margaret Anna (Fehrman) Overholt, daughter of Levi Fehrman and his wife, Margaret Forbes, of Haldimand county, Ont., was born 21 March 1873 in Haldimand county and died 4 May 1942 at Toronto, Ont. She was buried in the Prospect cemetery at Toronto. Her family went to Canada from Scotland.

a. George Horne was born 10 February 1858 at Old Bradwell, Buckinghamshire, England. He went to Canada when he was 16 years of age. Bertha was his third wife. By his first wife he had a daughter, Florence, and by his second wife he had a son, James.

March of that year they moved to Alberta, where George filed on a homestead at Fox Coulee (now Munson) about 100 miles northeast of Calgary. For one year he worked as foreman of a lime and stone quarry at The Gap, near Banff. In the spring of 1909 Bertha, with three of the children, Frank, Fred, and Gordon, went to live on the homestead, George and the remaining children staying in Calgary until 1910, when they rejoined the mother and the three boys on the homestead. Their building and all other supplies were hauled in from Calgary by horses, taking four or five days to a week to make the trip, depending on the condition of the roads and Knee Hill Creek and Red Deer River, which had to be forded. In the fall of 1910 the Canadian National Railway was built through the area.

The Horne homesteading proved to be highly successful. The specialty of the ranch was pure-bred stock. On 4 November 1919 George sold his ranch and moved with his wife and his daughter Mary to the nearby town of Drumheller.

Shortly after the death of her six-year-old son, of infantile paralysis, in 1913, Bertha suffered an illness which paralyzed her left side, but she regained enough strength to walk a little by using a cane and had some use of her hand. She was thus crippled until her death, which occurred 25 August 1922.

George died 30 September 1934. Both he and Bertha were buried in the Munson cemetery. They were members of the Methodist Church.

to leave the tongue. The other machine had two saws, one to square the end and the other to make the groove. The machines had an automatic trip which operated if boards of the wrong thickness or not properly squared were presented. See U. S. Patent No. 1,152,990, Sept. 7, 1915, Automatic Trip Mechanism for End Matching Machines.

Walter also invented a special cut-off saw which allowed the operator to use both hands to hold his work and his foot to release the trip that held the saw, this permitting greater speed and at the same time being less dangerous to the operator. See U. S. Patent No. 1,315,434, Sept. 9, 1919, Operating Mechanism for Swing Saws.

Walter died 22 December 1919 as the result of an accident in the planing mill. He was buried in the Mount Olivet cemetery at Nashville. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Church.

John Walter Taylor (1921-1944), only son of James Bennett and Hattie (Walling) Taylor, was born 8 March 1921 at Nashville, Tenn. He received his education at Nashville, graduating from the Hume Fogg high school in June 1938. He took a civil service examination and worked for the Government until he enlisted, during World War II, in the United States Air Force. "J. W.", as he was called, became a first lieutenant and piloted a B-24 bomber.[a] He was leading his squadron in the New Guinea theatre when his plane was shot down by the Japanese on Easter Sunday, 1944. He lost his left wing and radioed back that he thought he could make it, but just at that moment his tail fell and the bomber exploded before it hit the water. Not one of the crew of ten was ever heard from.[b] a. The following is part of a letter written by Lt. Taylor to his mother describing his experiences when, on his return from the bombing of Rabaul 18 October 1943, he and his crew were forced to bail out into the jungles of New Guinea:

"Dear Mother—We started out that morning around seven A. M. to bomb the Japs at a base on one of the Islands. Bad weather caused us to fly around quite a bit more than usual and we had bombed a secondary target. We then started for our home base.

"On the way back, just before we started over a stretch of jungles, we checked our gasoline tanks and the gauges indicated that plenty of gas remained. The gauges must have been off quite a bit because in just about fifteen minutes all the engines quit and we started down. I knew we were over some hills but we were in solid clouds and were unable to see the ground. Everybody got their chutes on and luckily we hit a clear spot so six of the crew jumped.

"We then hit another cloud but broke into the clear again right away and the four of us remaining proceeded to bail out. We were pretty close to the ground by then and from the short period of time that elapsed between the time I jumped and the time I stopped in the top of a tree, I judged that I had jumped about 800 feet above the ground. The plane continued to glide down in a circle and crashed on the side of a hill.

"We had dropped our bombs on the Nips and burned up all our gas so the plane did not burn or explode but I imagine it was smashed up a bit when it plowed into the trees.

"The section of the jungle we landed in had some pretty high trees, so when I stopped going down I found that my chute was tangled in the limbs in the top of a tree and that I was hanging about 15 feet from the nearest limb above me, and that about 100 feet of nothing was between my feet and mother earth down below. I unbuckled my straps, stood up in the seat of my chute and spent 45 minutes trying to climb shroud lines up to the limbs above me. Being unable to climb the silk lines I only wasted the time and strength. That wasted strength was later to cost me some skin off one leg and a hard bump in the region covered by my hip pockets. Finding I couldn't go up, I began to figure out a means of getting down. That was fun too, there wasn't a doggone thing under me but air.

"To make it really nice, I noticed that the wind was beginning to blow, and then it started raining. The wind started me swinging, so I just helped it along and finally caught a branch of a small tree nearby. The branch and tree were too small to hold me but I pulled on the limbs and managed to get to a large vine. Praying that the vine wouldn't break, I slipped out of my chute and hugged the vine for dear life. The vine held and so did I. Another vine crossed the one I was on below me, so I stopped when I got there and rested, but my arms and hands just wouldn't rest. I went down a little farther and caught another small limb with my legs and tried to rest but still no good. The strength wouldn't come back to my hands. Leaving the limb, I slid to within 25 feet of the ground before my hands gave out and I went down with no brakes. That is where the bump in the rear came in and also my leg that was wrapped around the vine sort of managed to leave some skin with the vine.

"When I could breathe again I went up the hill to where my co-pilot, Pat Freeman of Gilbertsville, Ill., was hanging about 40 feet from the ground. Freeman couldn't make it to any tree or vines and his hands slipped and he dropped to the ground. He was out cold for four or five minutes and the fall tore loose his sternum—that's the thing where your ribs meet in front. He is off for two months until that heals. Pat and I spent the night on the side of the hill and of course it rained all night. The next morning we walked down the hill and then down the stream which was at the bottom. We knew the stream would go to the coast and we would find natives near the river or on the coast.

"That morning we caught up with my Radio operator, Robert E. Fitzgerald of Quincy, Mass., and that afternoon we caught my tail gunner, Louis D. Ball, of Chicago, Ill. These were the others of the four that bailed out last. The six who bailed first got together and got back to the base in six days.

"We, three and myself, walked all day and slept at night on the ground in the rain. We climbed hills, waded and swam rivers, climbed up over and around rocks or the banks of the river for eleven days before we finally came to a native village.

"The only food we had was on the fifth day when we shot a fish and cleaned and ate it. We each got a piece about the size of the palm of your hand. That was all we had to eat for eleven days. We drank water out of the river without being able to purify it in any way.

"It was pretty rough going and we had a damn hard time but we all decided the first night that we would make it. We had been sitting around thinking and nobody saying anything. I had been thinking of home and you and Peggy and all the folks and friends and the good days, so I asked the boys if they all wanted to get back, and they each said 'Yes', so we all stacked hands together like in a football huddle before the game and said 'We will get back'. Maybe it seems silly, but it helped a lot then, and later, too. When somebody would get tired the others would talk him into getting up and walking a little farther. Being together made a lot of difference.

"When we got to the native village we asked for food, and they fed us and put us in an empty house and we slept that afternoon and night and the next day and night. Our stomachs had shrunk and we could only eat a little at a time, so we would eat a little and sleep awhile.

"The natives took care of us and carried us down the river to the coast to the nearest Army post.

"The canoe trip down the river lasted for ten hours and tired us quite a lot, but we slept good that night and came back by coastal lugger the next day to the port nearest our base.

"The Aussies had radioed the night before, so our squadron flight surgeon met us at the dock with an ambulance. We piled in and were carried to the squadron. They fed us a big dinner of hamburger steaks and fried eggs and raisin bread and fresh butter and canned pineapple juice. It was really good and we were so happy to be back at our squadron with our buddies and to find out the rest of the crew were back safe and sound and all of us were nearly in tears we were so happy. Then the Doc carried us over and, while he filled out the medical reports, he gave us big shots of real American whiskey and we talked to all the gang.

"Then we came to the hospital. I got 'Tsu Gamuchi' or Japanese river fever, commonly known as 'Scrub Typhus'. Don't worry, as it isn't as bad as it sounds. The worst part is the first nine days. It can be serious then if one is up and moving around. Fortunately I was in the hospital for a week before it started and now it is all over and I am recuperating very nicely. The way it can hurt you is when the fever starts if you don't get in bed and stay there it hardens the muscles around the heart and becomes fatal. As I said, I was in bed before it started, so there was no danger. My doctor was very smart and though he didn't know what I had he treated me as if I had everything, so it was O. K. The hospital has had only one death in 53 cases, and he didn't come in soon enough. Also, it leaves no after effects, so I don't have to worry about it ever coming back or having heart trouble in later life. It isn't bad at all, except that the fever burns you out quite a bit and you have to take it very slow getting up. I was set to get up yesterday and leave the hospital next week if nothing showed up. Since this Typhus came out in my last blood test, I will be in bed another week at least and then start walking around by easy stages and will be at least two weeks after I get up before I can leave the hospital. That will make my time in the hospital total up to seven weeks and that is a long time.

"I feel fine but am not trying to rush things as I don't want to take any chances, although I am anxious to get back to flying and get my time in so I can come home.

"Ball, my tail-gunner, got malaria. Fitzgerald lost his false teeth and has to wait two months to get some more, and is grounded. William E. (Shorty) Townsend of Mena, Ark., my navigator, came out worst of all. The day after they got back he had an epileptic convulsion and is in a general hospital for observation. If he has epilepsy, he will go back to the States for a medical discharge. I really hate it, because he is a wonderful navigator, but, more important, is the best little guy in all the world you could have for a friend. If I had a brother, I would want him to be like Shorty. He is really a swell fellow and it hurt like hell inside the day he left. You get kinder crazy about these guys you live and fly and fight with, and Shorty was by far the most valuable man on my crew. He knew his job backward and forward and could navigate in his sleep or with a hangover or both; I've seen him do it, in fact.

"I think this is a pretty good letter and hope it will pass the censor but I'm not sure.

"I honestly feel fine, so don't worry. I'll be up and flying and back home before you learn to pronounce 'Tsu Tsu Gamuchi' (Su-Su Gamushe). Be careful and write all the low-down; tell all the folks 'hello' and love. Jay."

SUSANNA TAYLOR

SUSANNA TAYLOR (1840-1926), youngest daughter of Jasper and Anna (Whale) Taylor, was born in England 17 April 1840. She was baptized in the Church of England at Highway, Wiltshire, 24 May 1840. She accompanied her parents to Canada in 1842 and resided at Forestville, Norfolk county, where her father was a wagon maker.

Susan was housekeeper for her brother Jesse in Port Rowan, Norfolk county, and helped him raise his children after the death of his wife in 1872. She later rented a house in Port Rowan, where she kept roomers and boarders and added to her income by making and selling home-made bread. Her boarding house was a popular home for students of the Port Rowan high school.

Toward the end of her life Susan lived for two years with her niece Mrs. Edward Francis at Hamilton, Ont., and for three years in the Osler Memorial Home at Dundas, Wentworth county, Ont., where she died 16 June 1926, at the age of 86. She was buried at Dundas.

APPENDIX I

BACKHOUSE FAMILY

MARY ANN BACKHOUSE (see John Taylor 1.4.) was granddaughter of Major John Backhouse, who was born 14 April 1755. With his wife and 8 children he left Yorkshire,[a] England, and came to New Jersey. They were accompanied by a young couple from Lancashire. The Lancashire couple remained in New Jersey, while the Backhouse family proceeded to Canada, residing first at St. Catharines, Ont.

At Newark 4 June 1794 Mr. Backhouse petitioned Governor Simcoe for an assignment of land, stating that his original intention had been to settle in Nova Scotia, but Upper Canada had been represented to him as possessing superior advantages. On 9 July 1794 he was granted 600 acres anywhere in the vicinity of York.

In 1795 Governor Simcoe visited Norfolk county and chose for its chief town, Charlotteville, at Turkey Point. Believing that Charlotteville was to become a town of great importance, Mr. Backhouse on 26 June 1795 petitioned to have his grant a. So stated on his tombstone; also by Mrs. Jane Moore (Backhouse) Ploughman of Aylmer, Ont., youngest daughter of Major John Backhouse, when interviewed by Albert Backus, lawyer of Aylmer, Ont., about 1870. E. A. Owen, is his Pioneer Sketches of the Long Point Settlement, 1898, said that Major John Backhouse was descended from a Lancashire family, one of the oldest and most distinguished Quaker families of England. Both statements may be correct.

According to Joseph Foster (Descendants of John Backhouse of Yealand Redman, Lancashire, yeoman, who died 1690, pub. 1894), this family resided in Lancashire and spread by 1770 to Yorkshire. One of the line was Sir Roger Backhouse (1879-1939), who was appointed First Sea Lord of the British Admiralty and Chief of the Naval Staff in February 1938. Members of the family in the 18th century established a flax-dressing mill in Yorkshire and founded Backhouse's Bank, which was later merged with Barclay's Bank.

Recent communication between the family of Sir Roger Backhouse in England and the descendants of Major John Backhouse in Port Rowan indicates that John Backhouse who came to St. Catharines in 1791, while from Yorkshire, was indeed a member of the Lancashire family. The proof appears to lie in the coat of arms used by the Canadian family, which is the same as that of the English family; in the Quaker speech of Major John Backhouse, there being no one in his neighborhood of the Quaker faith; and in his familiarity with milling, which was the business of the family in England at that time.

transferred[b] to the Long Point country. His petition was granted, and he settled on Lot 17, Con. 2, Walsingham township, Norfolk county.

Mr. Backhouse removed to the Long Point property about 1798 and on it erected a sawmill, sawed timber, and erected a house. He then built a large grist mill, the first grist mill in the western portion of Upper Canada. Later he built a much larger house, reputed to have had eighty doors and a spacious hall with a fireplace on each side, much of the interior woodwork being imported from England.[c] He then left his sons in charge of the mills at Port Rowan and went some 20 miles west to Silver Creek (a little east of Otter Creek, on which Port Burwell is located) where, on Lots 17 and 18, Con. 1, Malahide township, Elgin county, he built another mill. This mill, with the 400 acres of land and the houses and barns thereon, passed on his decease to his son Abraham.

Mr. Backhouse was one of the first justices of the peace in the London District of Upper Canada, having been appointed in April and sworn in in June 1800. In this capacity he solemnized marriages. In 1801, when the township of Walsingham was set off as a district division for judicial purposes and a Divisional Court of Requests (for the hearing of small claims) was established, Mr. Backhouse was appointed associate justice for this court, which was held at his own house. In 1809 he was sworn in as high constable for the District of London and in 1824 at Vittoria he was chairman at the summer term of the Court of Quarter Sessions for that district. He was major of the First Regiment of Norfolk militia during the War of 1812.

In 1814, when the Americans raided this locality, burning the mills in the new settlement, the Backhouse mills, being in a deep ravine, were overlooked.

Although Mr. Backhouse had a Quaker background, he presided in 1803 at a meeting of Episcopalian settlers at Job

c. In 1853 this house was replaced by a moderate-sized one. The flour mill was partly rebuilt and enlarged in 1808. The sawmill was torn down in 1898 and moved upstream about ¼ mile. The mills were still operating in 1947 and were reputed to be the oldest continuously operated mills in Ontario. Loder's tavern at Turkey Point to arrange for the establishment of an Anglican church in the settlement. His daughter, Jane Ploughman, said of her father that, while he did not always practice attending church, he insisted "most unscrupulously" that his family go. There is record of the baptism of three of his children by Rev. Robert Addison of St. Mark's Anglican Church, Niagara, 8 February 1802.

Besides the land which Major Backhouse had received as a military claimant, he acquired during his lifetime several hundred acres in addition, so that on his decease he bequeathed to various of his children a total of 1,400 acres in Norfolk, Elgin, and Haldimand counties. In the course of the management of his properties and in pursuance of the civic duties which he had assumed, he customarily rode his horse, followed by a pack of hounds, in the manner of an English squire.

John Backhouse married, in England, Margaret Longbottom,[d] and by her had 4 sons and 4 daughters:

(1) Mary, born 7 August 1777, who raised the children of her deceased sister, Elizabeth Hutchinson; lived for years alone on Gleadall's Hill near Port Rowan; and, when over eighty years old, died unmarried.

(2) William (1779-1864). See second generation below.

(3) Elizabeth, who married Alexander Hutchinson (born in New Jersey, son of William Hutchinson, United Empire Loyalist) and who appears to have died before 1827 since she was not mentioned in her father's will and her children —John, George, and Maria—were brought up by her eldest sister, Mary.

(4) John, who married Hannah, daughter of Lucas Dedrick, United Empire Loyalist, and died in 1849, leaving 7 children.

(5) Esther, who married James Butler Hutchinson, brother of her sister Elizabeth's husband; settled near Port Bur-

d. In later years, Mrs. Jane Ploughman of Aylmer, Ont., youngest child of Major John Backhouse and his second wife, in relating her recollections of her father and his family, said: "For some reason my father's first wife's people were opposed to the marriage, and they repaired in the morning to a church and were married in opposition to the wish and will of her parents and people."

well, Elgin county, Ont.; and had William, Alexander Butler (who married Phoebe Price), Haley, and Jane.

(6) Thomas (Oct. 15, 1786-Sept. 17, 1849), captain of the First Regiment of Norfolk militia, appointed 23 October 1830 at York; who married Amelia E. Young of Scotland; resided on his father's Port Rowan mill property, which he inherited on his father's death; and had six children.

(7) Abraham, who married Miss Alway; resided on and inherited Lots 17 & 18, Con. 1, Malahide township, Elgin county, Ont., on which land his father had built a mill; and had 8 children.

(8) Maria Jemima, who was baptized by Rev. Robert Addison of Niagara 8 February 1802 along with her younger half-brother, Henry, and her half-sister, Nancy; and who married Joseph Culver.

Margaret (Longbottom) Backhouse died in St. Catharines, Ont., in 1796 or 1797. About two years later John went to New Jersey, where the Backhouses had parted from the couple who accompanied them in 1791 from England, having learned that the wife, Jane Moore,[e] was now a widow. He married her and brought her back to Port Rowan. Jane was born at Bowe Hill, Lancashire, England. They had three children: Henry Moore; Nancy Moore, who married Mr. Wrong; and Jane Moore, who married Mr. Ploughman. These three settled in the vicinity of Aylmer, Ont., and became known as the Aylmer branch of the family. Jane, second wife of John Backhouse, died 2 October 1809 at the age of 39. She was buried in the private cemetery on the Major's mill property at Port Rowan.

Major Backhouse married (3) Hannah Hains. He died[f] 15 September 1827 and was buried in the private cemetery on his own Port Rowan mill property.

e. Mr. Owen gives Jane's family name as White, which probably was the name of her first husband.

f. John Backhouse left a will (see Surrogate Court records in Toronto, Ont.) with the following bequests:

To my wife Hannah £20 N. Y. currency to be paid unto her yearly during her widowhood, by my sons John and Thomas; to my eldest son, William, Lot 23, Con. 2,

Second generation

William Backhouse (May 7, 1779-Aug. 1, 1864), eldest son of Major John and Margaret (Longbottom) Backhouse, was born in England. He accompanied his parents to New Jersey and to St. Catharines, Ont., in 1791. He was a Methodist. He resided on Lot 23, Con. 2, Walsingham, 200 acres, which he inherited on his father's death. About 1803 he married Hannah McMichael, daughter of Capt. Edward and Elizabeth (McAllister) McMichael.[g] Hannah was born in 1788 and died 13 February 1849. She was buried in the private cemetery on the mill property of Major John Backhouse at Port Rowan. William and Hannah had 17 children, some of them twins. Their daughter Jane on her marriage took one pair of twins home with her.[h]

William died at the age of 85. He was buried beside his wife in the private cemetery on the mill property of Major John Backhouse at Port Rowan. His will, dated 14 October 1857, mentioned his second wife, Rebecca, and 12 children. Rebecca was to receive one-third of his personal property, she to have choice of which third; the remainder was to be sold at auction and half of the proceeds was to go to his daughter Matilda Backhouse for her portion, the rest to be distributed as follows: £8 each to daughters Ellen Cooper and Mima Roberts; 5s each to daughters Elizabeth Cook, Margaret Johnson, Jane Smith, Hannah Vanderburg, Amelia Willard, and Mary Ann Taylor (see third generation below); 5s each to sons George Backhouse, John A. APPENDIX 4

EEDY FAMILY

LORNE ALDEN RICHARD EEDY (see Margaret Grace Evelyn Wilson 1.6.1.2.) was descended from Jonathan Eedy, a soldier in Cromwell's "Ironsides" army. By the Cromwellian settlement (1658) following Cromwell's conquest of Ireland, two-thirds of the land of Ireland was transferred to Cromwell's officers and men. Officers received the estates and their men settled on the estates as tenants for protection and to keep the Irish in subjection. Both Jonathan and his brother Nicholas, who was also a soldier in Cromwell's army, accordingly settled in Ireland. They came from Wales and were claimed to have been descended from a man named "Edrighe", who came to England with William the Conqueror.

Jonathan's brother Nicholas settled at Killvaree, near Clonakilty, County Cork, Ireland, on the estate of a Colonel Allen, who continued to live in England. Nicholas married Hannah Knowles and had four sons and several daughters. His sons were Nicholas, Jonathan, William, and Robert. Jonathan, son of Nicholas, married Rebecca Wolfe, from west of Dunmanway, County Cork, Ireland. From him descended William Eedy of Saroo, who was born in 1765, and married Susan Hill, daughter of David Hill "of the same plowland." In 1828, at the age of 63, William and his family went to Canada. He died in 1839, and Susan died in 1857. Both were buried in Christ churchyard at Bathurst, N. B. They had five daughters and one son, William, who was born in 1815. William resided at Clifton, Gloucester county, N. B. He married his cousin Susan Hill. They had 10 children, of whom four sons and three daughters were living in 1877. The sons were William, David, Horace, and Thomas. Of these, William was a carpenter in St. John, N. B., in 1877.

Jonathan Eedy, brother of Nicholas Eedy above, settled at Killdee, County Cork, Ireland, on the estate of Sir Michael Cox. From him descends John Eedy, pioneer of the Eedy family in Ontario.

First generation in Ontario

John, son of Charles Eedy, was born about 1785 and married, in Ireland, a daughter of Richard Tanner, "a fine, honest farmer" of Carriga Yreanan (in English: Sunny Rock), County Cork, Ireland. John Eedy with his wife and family went to Canada about 1844. His eldest son was Edward, whose daughter Victoria married John R. Campbell of Kelowna, B. C., and died in 1947. His second son was Richard.

Second generation in Ontario

Richard Eedy was born in 1815 at Skibbereen, County Cork, Ireland, near Bantry Bay. He went to Canada with his parents about 1844. He died in 1889 in London township, Middlesex county, Ont., as the result of being kicked by a horse. His wife was Ellen Wolfe, who was born in 1833 in County Cork, Ireland. She died in 1911 near Granton, Middlesex county, Ont. They had a son, John Wolfe Eedy.

Third generation in Ontario

John Wolfe Eedy was born 26 November 1854 near Granton, Middlesex county, Ont., and died 27 September 1932. He married Sarah Ellen Walden, daughter of Thomas Walden (who was born 6 May 1806 at Killashandra, County Cavan, Ireland, went to Canada about 1820, and died 28 April 1886 at Elginfield, Middlesex county, Ont.) and his 2nd wife, Mary Kennedy.

Mary Kennedy was daughter of Thomas Kennedy (1790-1866) and Mary Wilson, widow of Thomas Mulligan. Thomas Kennedy migrated from County Cavan, Ireland, to Southwold, Elgin county, Ont., in 1837. Mary was born in 1822 and died at Elginfield in 1904.

Sarah Ellen Walden was born 12 August 1857 and died 17 September 1922 at St. Mary's, Ont.

John Wolfe Eedy was a public school principal. He went into the newspaper business and, in 1899, owned a controlling interest in the St. Thomas Daily Times. He later became owner of The St. Mary's Journal. He had one daughter, Irene, who married Archibald Gillies and had no children; and one son, Lorne Alden Richard Eedy, born 10 July 1881 at Elginfield, Middlesex county, Ont., who married Margaret Grace Evelyn Wilson (1.6.1.2.).

His name was entered (as deceased) on the United Empire Loyalist List in Canada by Order-in-Council 18 June 1807, his death having occurred in 1794 or 1795. His wife's name was Melissa. Mr. Fairchild and his wife, with their family of 4 sons and 3 daughters, resided at Queensbury and Fort Edward in the Lake Champlain area of New York State previous to 1792, in which year they migrated to Ontario and settled on the Grand River near Brantford. The petition of his son for inclusion of his father's name on the United Empire Loyalist List stated: "He came into this Province in 1792 with his family consisting of an aged wife, Melissa, and 4 sons and 3 daughters." His 7 children were:

(1) Peter Fairchild, son of Benjamin Fairchild, Sr., was born in 1760 in the Province of New York. In 1777 he joined the British Army under General Burgoyne and remained in the Army until the capitulation, when he returned to his father's house, which was at that time within the British lines. In 1790 he resided in Queensbury township, Washington county, N. Y., and in his family were 1 boy under 16 and 4 girls (see census records, National Archives, Washington, D. C.). He went to the Province of Ontario (then Upper Canada) in

a. It is assumed, following Timothy Marsh Fairchild in his The Name and Family of Fairchild, 1940, that this Benjamin Fairchild is the same Benjamin Fairchild who went from Queensbury, N. Y., to Ontario in 1792. The assumption encounters no inherent improbabilities.

1792 and settled in the township of Townsend, Norfolk county, about 3 miles northeast of Boston, in what became known as the Old Boston Settlement. His wife's name was Sarah Fuller. On 24 July 1793 Mr. Fairchild petitioned for Lot 12 on "Jones's land from Burlington Bay to the Grand River", and his petition was granted under Order-in-Council 18 April 1797. He took the oath of allegiance before Samuel Ryerse, justice of the peace, 27 April 1797. He was then 37 years old. (See Crown Land papers in Department of Public Records and Archives, Toronto, Ont.). He was the first pastor of the old Boston Baptist church in the township of Townsend and served from 1806 to 1820. As daughter of a United Empire Loyalist she received 200 acres of land in Ontario, her Order-in-Council being dated 18 April 1797. She was said to have been a woman of fine intelligence, great energy and courage. She married Daniel Springer (1763-1826), son of David Springer, United Empire Loyalist, and settled in Delaware township, Middlesex county, Ont. Daniel was taken prisoner by the Americans in the War of 1812 (see p. 184). Ruth died about 1856.

(3) Benjamin Fairchild, Jr., son of Benjamin Fairchild, Sr., and his wife, Melissa, was born in the Province of New York. When he was young, he was shooting deer with his brother Isaac when a party of Mohawk Indians appeared and carried him off to Canada, where they kept him captive for some time. At a later date his brother Isaac went to Canada to search for him and found him in the Niagara district. The brothers returned to their home in New York State but went back to the Province of Ontario in 1792 with their father and mother, two other brothers and three sisters.

Benjamin served as a volunteer and afterwards as a non-commissioned officer (corporal) in General Burgoyne's Royal Regiment of New York during the Revolutionary War, as stated in a petition signed at Newark (Niagara-on-the-Lake) 12 August 1795. On 24 July 1793 he petitioned for and was granted Lot 23 on "Jones's land from Burlington Bay to the Grand River". His Order-in-Council, in which he was described as Indian interpreter of Niagara, was dated 18 April 1797.

In a petition dated 18 April 1797 he recited his services as a volunteer and afterwards as a non-commissioned officer, stated that he had drawn 400 acres of land, and prayed for a grant of Lots 26 and 27 in the 4th concession and Lots 26 and 27 in the 5th concession of the township of Ancaster, Wentworth county, Ont. This petition was endorsed: "The petitioner seems to have all the land he is entitled to. Any specific lots he may wish for as part of the lands granted he must apply to the Surveyor-General."

In a petition dated 17 April 1799 he asked for liberty to locate 500 acres of land which he stated he had bought from Squire McCoye on 20 September 1790.

Benjamin married (1) Mary, daughter of Peter Hare. On 13 July 1806 at Niagara he married (2) Margaret, daughter of Harmonus Van Alstine, widow of Mr. Muir. Among his children were:

1. Elizabeth, who was born in the township of Ancaster, married (1) Mr. Willson of Niagara and (2) John Bessey of Grantham, Lincoln county, Ont. She received a grant of land as daughter of a Loyalist under Order-in-Council dated 27 March 1813.

He went into the Province of Ontario in 1792 with his father and mother, 3 brothers and 3 sisters. He had previously visited Canada on a search for his brother Benjamin, who had been carried off from their home in New York State and kept captive by the Mohawk Indians. With his brother Benjamin, from whom he learned to speak the Indian language, he established a trading post on Fairchild's Creek in Brant county, where they traded with Chief Joseph Brant and his Mohawks. It is said of Isaac that "because of his bravery, integrity, and truthfulness he was much esteemed by Chief Joseph Brant, who made him an honorary chief and named him Hawkeye. He was 6 feet 2 in his stockings, as straight as an arrow, and with an eye like a hawk."

On 24 July 1793 Isaac petitioned for and received Lot 14 on "Jones's land from Burlington Bay to the Grand River", under Order-in-Council dated 3 July 1797. Under orders from General Brock, the British commander, he was seized, but he escaped to the American army at Sandwich. He was denounced as a traitor, and his property, said to include approximately 4,000 acres of land, was confiscated. In January 1814 he returned to Delaware at the head of a detachment of Michigan Rangers and destroyed his own house and other buildings, after which he retreated down the river to Detroit, taking with him his own family (he had 12

FRANKLIN FAMILY

ELIZABETH JANE FRANKLIN, wife of John Irvine McNiece (see Maria Wilson 1.6.6., note a), was great-granddaughter of Joseph Franklin, Sr., United Empire Loyalist, who was born about 1724 in England and came to America in 1757 with the 27th Regiment of the British Army. He was discharged in 1763 after 21 years of service. As a disbanded soldier (with the rank of sergeant) the British Government granted him 5 July 1765 two hundred acres of land on the west side of Lake Champlain near Crown Point. He cleared 15 acres, built a house, and acquired another house at Crown Point.

When the Revolutionary War broke out, he was offered a lieutenancy if he would join the revolutionists. Instead, he joined the forces of General Carleton in 1776, after the failure of the colonists' invasion of Canada, and served in the engineers' department. As a result he lost through confiscation his land, houses, and other property consisting of a horse and a mare, a bullock and heifer, furniture, farming utensils, and some hay. In 1782 he was living at Carleton Island (in the St. Lawrence River opposite Kingston). He was in Government employment in 1783. Listed as a Loyalist, his name was on the "provision list"[a] at Kingston in 1786. On 27 February 1788, as a resident of Carleton Island, he filed a claim with the British Government for losses in the sum of £80 sterling by reason of his loyalty to the Crown. In this claim he stated that he had filed a previous claim with Stephen DeLancey in 1784 (deposited in the Public Record office in London, Eng.; amount £113, allowed at £90). His claim setting forth his £80 losses

a. Provision lists were lists containing names of immigrants receiving food from the Government as emergency relief. Most of the recipients were incoming Loyalists and ex-soldiers from the British Army, and their families.

was attested by Dr. Thomas Sparham, who added under oath "Joseph Franklin is a very honest man." He had a son whom he named after himself—Joseph.

Joseph Franklin, Jr., (ca. 1765-ca. 1830) was born probably at Crown Point, N. Y., after his father was separated from the British Army. He was too young to have served in the Revolutionary War, but was on Carleton Island in 1782 and, about 1786, as son of a Loyalist, received 400 acres of land in the township of Pittsburgh, Frontenac county, Ont., 8 miles east of Kingston. Here he built a log cabin and cleared the land. He had married a short time before.

One of the sons of Joseph Franklin, Jr., became a blacksmith, married, resided at Cobourg, Ont., and had two daughters and a son. His wife died when the children were quite young, and soon afterwards he himself died, of blood poisoning. The children were taken by relatives. Elizabeth Jane, born in 1824, one of the three children, was raised in the home of her grandfather, Joseph Franklin, Jr.

Joseph Franklin, Jr., died before the Rebellion of 1837. There were five daughters and one son, William, living when his wife died, and the Franklin property was divided among the heirs. Elizabeth Jane,[b] granddaughter of Joseph Franklin, Jr., married John Irvine McNiece (see Maria Wilson 1.6.6., note a).

b. The following account of her recollections while in the home of her grandparents was written by Elizabeth Jane (Franklin) McNiece about the year 1910 for Rod & Gun:

"My grandfather with his young wife settled anew in the township of Pittsburgh. The Government gave each family 400 acres of land, a year's provisions, also seed and a supply of implements. By the year 1800 they were raising enough for their own wants and a surplus which enabled them to aid new arrivals.

"In early days there was a grist mill at Gananoque and one day my grandfather made the ten-mile journey through the woods to the mill. There was a blazed trail but the journey was slow and necessitated being away from home one night. My grandmother with her young children was left alone and naturally felt very apprehensive over possible visits of wild animals. What she feared happened. There was a rain trough outside, and about ten o'clock at night grandmother glanced up and saw a bear on this trough looking through the window. Although much frightened, she did not lose her head. Grandfather had taken the gun with him, but the fire was replenished and the axe, the most dependable weapon of pioneer times, set in a handy place in case of necessity. After a time the bear took his departure, having apparently satisfied himself that the preparations he saw in progress betokened a warmer reception than he thought desirable. Probably he went off to plunder some neighbor's pig sty, for all bears dearly love pork. Notwithstanding the departure of the bear, Grandmother's vigil continued all night and it was only when morning dawned that she permitted her vigilance to relax.

"When the Rideau Canal was built many of the towns in Pittsburgh township were flooded. In the severe winter frosts, the canal, with all this overflowed land, was solidly frozen over, making a fine winter highway for the wolves. Always a great pest, the wolves grew bolder when such a good gathering ground was made for them. I remember one afternoon when three wolves killed three of my grandfather's sheep in a field not far from the house. My grandmother cried badly over this loss and I joined her in her lamentations.

"Deer were very plentiful in those days and my people would secure hundreds of them in a season. Venison is salted and cured in the same way as pork is cured. It was then packed in barrels and shipped to Montreal, by sleighs in winter time and by boats through the Rideau Canal when navigation was open. I well remember seeing a large log building full of deer from the floor to the rafters, all ready to be dressed and cured for shipment to the eastern market. Home tanneries were the rule in those days, though only a few were sufficiently expert to make buckskin suitable for really fine articles of wearing apparel.

"During the trying times of 1837 and '38 I was a girl of 13 and lived with my grandmother on her farm east of Kingston, my grandfather having died some years before. The house was an extra good one for those days, being a large frame structure with a good hall running through the centre. Four big square rooms opened from the hall and at the back was an immense farm kitchen where the housework of the 400-acre farm was carried on. In winter the house was kept warm and comfortable by four large fireplaces and two cast iron double heaters, all burning four-foot wood, the chunks often being as large as three or four men could handle. The military authorities finding such large and convenient quarters took possession of the house and used it as a base of supplies and as a military post. Similar posts extended from Montreal to Toronto and no doubt in many other directions. They were about ten miles apart and each under the command of an officer and company of soldiers. Despatches and other communications were passed from post to post and there was plenty of life at each post which rose to fever heat when a despatch bearer was robbed and sometimes killed.

"My grandmother was threatened in various ways, these threats generally taking the form of promises to burn her buildings. As a result an extra company was stationed at the house and a sentry constantly on the watch to prevent molestation.

"The first winter of the Rebellion the St. Lawrence never froze over. During a residence near its banks extending over half a century, my people could not remember such an unusual occurrence. Generally we had six weeks of sleighing before New Year's, then a January thaw, and six further weeks of a freeze-up. The open winter gave a number of advantages to those in opposition. Naturally all this excitement was not unpleasant to a young girl, and I assisted my grandmother in many little attentions to the soldiers. These duties consisted in using the needle, frequently writing letters for them, and administering simple remedies for minor injuries and colds. There was much coming and going and the men appeared to enjoy deeply the rest when they were allowed to remain at our house over night. Once we had a cavalry company stopping with us and to my youthful eyes they looked fine with their gleaming sabres flashing in the sunshine, neatly fitting clothes and mounted as they were on prancing horses. About one hundred pounds of meat—beef, pork, mutton or venison—would be needed daily with all these extra men with us.

"I can well remember the time when Von Schultz, leading a band of Yankees, crossed the River and took possession of a mill near Prescott. The skirmish was a stubborn one and some of the men who lost their lives on our side were amongst those who had made our house their headquarters for a time. Great excitement prevailed at our house during the encounter, the despatch bearers coming and going with foaming horses. Prescott was only 40 miles from our place, and the orders were to rush forward every available man. That engagement took place 16 November 1838. Soon after that date peace was restored and calmness succeeded the blustering scenes.

"Ten years afterwards what was known as the 'emigrant fever' broke out. The disease was brought to Canada by those who had undergone severe hardships while crossing the Atlantic. It proved difficult to fight as the continual army of New-comers added fresh fuel to the flames.

"Later on the cholera broke out and many sad scenes resulted. Families were decimated, and mine suffered with the rest.

"In old days, everyone rode on horseback, an exhilarating exercise that gave great enjoyment to its participants. I owned a fine English hunting saddle of which I was very proud. I attended many funerals on horseback and often thirty or forty people would attend, similarly mounted."

APPENDIX 7

GEE FAMILY

CHARLES GEE of Norfolk county, Ont., (see Jane Taylor 1.8.) was son of John Gee. Members of the Canadian branch are of the belief that the family is of Welsh ancestry and that the name was originally spelled "Ghee". Burke's Commoners of Great Britain lists the family as one of the most ancient in Yorkshire. Johnson's The Place Names of England and Wales makes reference to a village called "Gee Cross", in the parish of Stockport, Cheshire, where a cross was erected in ancient days by the Gee family. (See The Gee Family of Union County, S. C., 1935, by Wilson Gee).

John Gee married Hannah Evidon and resided in New York State, probably in Jefferson county. They appear to have moved to Wolfe Island (in the St. Lawrence River opposite Kingston, Ont.), where, until about 1870, they lived on the 7th concession.[a] They had 10 children:

(1) Merritt.
(2) Louvilla.
(3) John.
(4) Laura Ann, who was born 20 January 1818 in New York State. When her parents objected to her proposed marriage with Joseph Smith, a man 20 years her senior, who was born 15 March 1798 in New York State, she and Joseph went from New York State across the St. Lawrence River on the ice to Canada 11 January 1834 and married. Both died at Lind, Waupaca county, Wisc., Laura Ann on 12 December 1858 and Joseph on 18 February 1877. They had 4 children:

a. While old residents on Wolfe Island remember a farm on the 7th concession being referred to as the "Gee farm", the registrar of deeds for Frontenac county, in which Wolfe Island lies, has no record of land on Wolfe Island having been held by anyone of that name. The assumption is that their land was leased and the lease was not registered, as was true in many cases. All of Wolfe Island was granted by the Crown to one family about 1800 and much of it is still (1948) in possession of descendants of that family.

1. Jeremiah Wise Smith, who was born in Canada West (now Ontario) 4 May 1835 and died 8 July 1917 at Tillsonburg, Ont. On 16 June 1856 he married Catherine Armstrong, who was born 13 March 1838 in Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont., daughter of Squire Lawrence Armstrong (see Jesse Taylor 1.7., note a), and died 24 November 1909 at South Middleton, Norfolk county, Ont. They had 8 children:

   (a) William Arthur, who was born 24 July 1857 at South Middleton and died 17 December 1875.

   (b) Charles Wilmot, who was born 26 June 1860 and died 20 March 1865.

   (c) George Oscar, farmer, who was born 25 July 1862 at South Middleton, and died unmarried 10 June 1893.

   (d) Ella, who was born 8 December 1864 at South Middleton and died 13 January 1918. She married Thaddeus Ghent Fisher,[b] farmer of North Walsingham township, Norfolk county, who was born 30 June 1862. From 1914 they resided at Tillsonburg, Ont. They had 8 children—

      i. Harold Wilfred, who was born 21 September 1885 and died 11 September 1886.

      ii. Andrew Cecil, who was born 11 April 1889. He was a blacksmith, and resided at Tillsonburg, Ont. He was not married.

      iii. Hester Catherine, who was born in May 1891 and died the day following her birth.

b. Thaddeus Ghent Fisher was a descendant of Adam Fisher, French Hugenot, who, after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes by King Louis XIV of France in 1685, fled from France and settled in Freinsheim in the Palatinate district of Germany, on the west side of the Rhine River. Adam's son Jacob migrated in 1726 to America, settling in Upper Philadelphia county (now Montgomery), Pa. Jacob's great-grandson, Herman, who was born 15 November 1771, went to Canada in 1799 and settled near Vineland in Clinton township, Lincoln county, Ont., where he died in 1825. Thaddeus Ghent Fisher was great-grandson of Herman. (From records in possession of Myrtle Rosabelle (Fisher) Addison of Otterville, Ont.).

iv. Charles Clayton, who was born 28 August 1892. During World War I he served 2 years with the 47th Battalion of the Canadian Army. On 12 July 1919 in England he married Annie May Earp of Thornton Heath, Surrey, who was born 25 June 1894. He was a brakeman on the New York Central Railroad. They resided at Windsor, Ont., and had: Donald Thaddeus, who was born 28 March 1920, served in World War II, and 16 March 1944 married Grace Audrey Rowlandson, by whom he had Donna Mae, who was born 8 April 1945, and Paul Stewart, who was born 12 September 1946; Iris Kathleen, who was born 5 April 1923 and on 7 November 1939 married Henry Moore, from whom she was divorced in 1945 and by whom she had Charles Clayton, who was born 16 October 1940, and Kathleen Anne, who was born 31 October 1941; and Beverley Mae, who was born 22 June 1926 and married 28 September 1946 John R. APPENDIX 8

HAZEN FAMILY

EUGENE HAZEN (see Almira Louks 1.3.7., note a) was descended from Edward Hazen of Rowley, Mass., as follows:

First generation in America

Edward Hazen (1614-1683) came to America from Northamptonshire, England, about 1638, and was in Rowley, Mass., in 1649, when his wife Elizabeth died. He married (2) Hannah Grant. The inventory of Mr. Hazen's estate amounted to £404.7s.6d. By his second wife he had 11 children, the fourth being Thomas.

Second generation in America

Thomas Hazen (1657/8-1735) was born at Rowley, Mass., and resided in Norwich, Conn., where he died. He married 1682/3 Mary Howlett, by whom he had 11 children, one of whom was John.

Third generation in America

John Hazen (1687/8-1772) was born at Boxford, Mass., married (1) Mercy Bradstreet, by whom he had 7 children, and married (2) 31 May 1726 Elizabeth (Dart ?), by whom he had 5 children. His seventh child was Daniel.

Fourth generation in America

Daniel Hazen (1724-1788) moved to New Jersey in 1767 and died at Independence, N. J., in 1788. He had sons: William of New Brunswick; Caleb of Woodhouse township, Norfolk county, Ont.; and Daniel.

First generation in Canada

Daniel Hazen was born 10 August 1755 in Sussex county, N. J. In the War of the American Revolution he was loyal to the British Crown and served as a sergeant in the Jersey Volunteers, in Barlow's Regiment. In 1780 he married Anna Ward. In 1783, after the war was over, they took refuge in New Brunswick. He took his family to the Niagara District in the general exodus of Loyalist families from New Brunswick to Upper Canada. Daniel was a surveyor by profession. In 1796 he was sent, with another surveyor, to survey the township of Charlotteville, Norfolk county, Ont. In the same year he began a survey of Walsingham, Norfolk county, which he finished in the winter of 1797-98. With this opportunity to look over the land, he chose, under his right as a United Empire Loyalist, 200 acres on the 5th concession of Walsingham. This area became known as the "Hazen Settlement".

Mr. Hazen and his wife were Methodists, and customarily walked 17 miles from the Hazen home to attend Methodist church services in the township of Woodhouse. He went regularly, and she four times a year to the quarterly meetings. He died on his farm in the Hazen Settlement 29 November 1845 and was buried in the Hazen cemetery on the 5th concession. He had 9 children, each of whom, with the exception of Charlotte, who probably died young, received 200 acres of land from the Government as son or daughter of a Loyalist. The children were: (1) Lydia, who was born in 1783; (2) Daniel, who was born in 1784; (3) William, who was born in 1786; (4) John; (5) Rachel, who was born in 1791; (6) Charlotte, who was born in 1793; (7) Caleb; (8) Elijah (see below); and (9) Jacob, who was born in 1799.

Second generation in Canada

Elijah Hazen was born 12 July 1797 at Black Creek, Welland county, Ont. He received 200 acres of land as son of a Loyalist under Order-in-Council dated 12 August 1818. For several years he carried the mail, by horse and buggy, from Port Rowan to Vittoria and return, once each week, the pay being 75 cents a week. He married Mary, daughter of Major George Neal, United Empire Loyalist, who is said to have preached the first Methodist sermon in Upper Canada, in 1786 at Queenston, and may be the man carried on the Loyalist List as George Neil, who served during the Revolutionary War in the Loyal Militia of South Carolina and bore arms at 66. Elijah died 30 March 1857. He had 11 children, the eldest of whom was John Wesley.

Third generation in Canada

John Wesley Hazen was born 18 June 1819 in Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont., and died about 1880. He was buried in the Hazen cemetery on the 5th concession of Walsingham. By his wife, Mercy Culver, of Woodhouse township, Norfolk county, he had 2 children: (1) Mary, who was born in 1852 and died in 1879; and (2) Eugene, who was born in 1854 and married Almira Louks (see Almira Louks 1.3.7.).

APPENDIX 9

KILBOURNE FAMILY

JAMES HAMILTON KILBOURNE (see Martha Ethel Wilson 1.6.3.6.) was descended from Joseph Kilbourne, Jr., (1745-1817) who resided at Litchfield, Conn., until 1787, when he removed to Meshopping Creek, near Wilkes Barre, Pa. Two years later he removed to Geneva, N. Y., where he erected a number of mills. In 1794 he went to Canada, settled first at Niagara Falls and, one year later, became one of the earliest settlers of Delaware township, Middlesex county, Ont. There, with his sons, he established a grist mill[a] on the Thames River at Kilworth Bridge. He had children:

(1) Susannah, who was born at Litchfield, Conn., 4 July 1766.

(2) Timothy, who was born at Litchfield, Conn., 11 June 1768 and died in Delaware township. Among his children were: (a) Clarissa, who married John Robertson, died in 1871 at the age of 71 years, 10 months, and was buried in the Kilbourne cemetery at Kilworth Bridge; and (b) Harvey (1810-1879), who married Sarah Hunt (1818-1884), and was buried in the Kilbourne cemetery. During his lifetime Harvey ran the Kilbourne grist mill. Harvey had a son, Samuel D. Kilbourne (Dec. 9, 1849-Dec. 26, 1923), who married Ellen Mair. Ellen was born in Westminster township, Middlesex county, in 1856 and died 22 October 1943.

(3) Elizabeth, who was born at Litchfield, Conn., 4 June 1770 and died young.

(4) Aaron, who was born at Litchfield, Conn., 30 January 1773. In 1795 he married Hannah Woodhull of Long Island and soon after, with his father, brothers, and other members of the family, settled in Delaware township. Aaron stated that he and his brother Timothy sold their property in the United States for £500, and gave the following account of the region in which they settled: "The county of Middlesex was at that time a vast wilderness, inhabited by Indians who lived by fishing and the chase. Our new home was near the bank of the Thames about 140 miles west of Niagara Falls. There was not a blacksmith's shop or a mill within 60 miles of us, and the only road was an Indian warpath. There was but one white family in Delaware township when we arrived, Daniel and Ruth (Fairchild) Springer".

a. The site of the grist mill is now (1948) the Woodeden property, a hospital for crippled children.

(5) Lucy Kilbourne, who was born about 1775 and married, about 1797, Isaac Fairchild, who was born 1 November 1769. They settled on Fairchild's Creek in Brant county but traded their farm for one in the township of Townsend in Norfolk county. They had 15 children. (See Appendix 5—Fairchild Family.)

APPENDIX IO

McMICHAEL FAMILY

MARY ANN BACKHOUSE (see John Taylor 1.4.) was daughter of William and Hannah (McMichael) Backhouse. Hannah was born in 1788, daughter of Edward McMichael and his wife, Elizabeth McAllister.

Edward McMichael was born in Newton, Sussex county, N. J. When the Revolutionary War broke out, he was a prosperous merchant in Philadelphia. He had the rank of lieutenant in the patriot army, but in August 1776 he deserted to the British. He is said by Mr. Owen to have lost the sight of one eye at the Battle of Trenton (December 1776-January 1777). In March of 1777 he was sent out of Philadelphia by Sir William Howe, accompanied by two British sergeants, into the county "as on private business" and remained there two months. He served as a lieutenant in the quartermaster-general's department in the Loyalist corps of Guides and Pioneers commanded by Colonel Beverly Robinson. On 24 June 1779 he was put on half pay, along with five other officers. He appears to have resumed active service later since, according to Mr. Owen, he was a prisoner of war at the time of the Yorktown surrender on 19 October 1781.

After the peace Mr. McMichael was one of sixty-two persons whom the Legislature of Pennsylvania ordered to stand trial for treason or stand attainted. He chose not to stand trial and was accordingly attainted and his property was confiscated. He left for Canada in the spring of 1788.

Mr. McMichael had married Elizabeth McAllister of Philadelphia[a] and by the spring of 1788 had five children.

a. Mr. Owen states that Elizabeth was a member of an influential family of that name in Philadelphia. An interesting, if true, account of the circumstances surrounding the meeting of Edward McMichael and Elizabeth McAllister is recorded in a letter from Miss Dora McMichael of Waterford, Ont., dated at Waterford January 1897, to her cousin Dr. George McMichael of Buffalo, N. Y. The following extract from the letter is filed under the name McMichael among cards relating to early settlers in Ontario in the Department of Public Records and Archives, Toronto, Ont.:

"Capt. Edward McMichael, a young man who came over with the British Army

One child appears to have been left in Philadelphia. Another was sent in advance with the family of Captain Frye. The family made the journey on horseback with an Indian guide. Mrs. McMichael carried the youngest child, Hannah, in her arms, and two other children rode in baskets on either side of the horse.

On the way the mother was taken seriously ill. A squaw took them in and made them as comfortable as she could. Mrs. McMichael, thinking that she was about to die, was giving the baby to the squaw when Capt. McMichael came in. "No", he said, "we'll have to carry on; we can't give the baby up". The mother recovered and the party continued on to Niagara. The baby, Hannah McMichael, grew up and married William Backhouse, and had 17 children of her own. The 17th, Matilda (Backhouse) Foster, telling the story in later years to her own daughter, would conclude by saying: "And now, my dear, you see how near you came to being a papoose!"

The McMichael family crossed the Niagara River in August and remained in the Niagara settlement until 1794, when they removed to Long Point and settled on Lot 14 on the Lake front of Walsingham township, a little west of Port Rowan. His petition for family lands was dated at Newark (Niagara-on-the-Lake) 16 July 1797. In it Capt. McMichael stated that he had come into the Province in the fall of 1788 (not 1787, as stated by Mr. Owen in Pioneer Sketches of the Long Point Settlement, 1898) with his wife and 5 children. Elizabeth petitioned for land 11 June 1798 and received 200 and was a captain in a Scotch regiment during the Revolutionary War, got separated from his regiment and secreted himself in a female seminary. He was discovered by one of the young ladies, Miss Jennie Elizabeth McAllister, daughter of Dr. McAllister of Philadelphia, Pa., surgeon in the Continental Army. They fell in love, and were married. They had a son, John McMichael, who became the head of the McMichael family of Philadelphia."

In connection with the above tradition, it will be noted that in the will of Elizabeth (McAllister) McMichael, made in 1838 in the Long Point Settlement of Canada, she left $5 to her son John with the proviso: "If he should come into this Province".

There was a John McMichael, born 1777 and died 1846, who was employed on the estate of Joseph Bonaparte at Bordentown, N. J., not far from Philadelphia. He married Hannah Maria Masters and had a son, Morton, who became prominent in the political and journalistic life of Philadelphia.

acres. Their children received land under Orders-in-Council dated as follows:

Juliana (who married Anthony Fick) 16 February 1816 and 9 July 1827; William (of Norwich, Oxford county, Ont.) 9 February 1820; Hugh (of Walsingham township, Norfolk county, Ont.) 19 March 1840; James (of Walsingham) 16 February 1816; Hannah (who married William Backhouse) 7 August 1811 and 26 March 1817; Eliza (who married DeLong) 18 July 1816; Eleanor (who married Henry Ellis of Oakland, Brant county, Ont.) 15 March 1832.

In 1797 and 1798 Edward McMichael served as captain in the Norfolk County Militia, the record being preserved in the Mitchell collection, Misc., Vol. VII, Public Archives of Canada, Ottawa, Ont.

When the McMichael family came to Walsingham, they were neighbors of Dr. John Troyer, the first white settler in the township. Dr. Troyer was superstitious and looked upon certain of his neighbors as witches, one of the most dreaded being Elizabeth McMichael. When Dr. Troyer went deer hunting, if he met Mrs. McMichael he considered it an ill omen and would turn about and go home. Mrs. McMichael, who was a well educated and clever woman, derived much amusement from the situation and is reported to have told Dr. Troyer that she could not step over a broomstick or it would ride her away.

Edward McMichael died in September 1800. Elizabeth died in 1839. In her will, dated 8 September 1838, Elizabeth "being old but of sound mind and memory" made bequests as follows:

To daughter Julianna Fick, 6 acres, the northwesterly angle of the front part of Lot 14, Front, township of Walsingham; to son William McMichael, 5 acres, at his death this land to be sold and divided equally between his two daughters, Eleanor and Sarah; to son Hugh, the remainder of her farm, after his death the farm to be sold and 1/3 the price to go to her son James if then living; to daughter Hannah Backhouse, $100; to daughter Eliza DeLong, the right to occupy part of her dwelling house and 1 acre of land for a garden as long as she remain a widow or as long as her son Hugh should live; Elizabeth Rierson and Ann McMichael to share equally the furniture; to daughter Eleanor Ellis, $100 to be spent for the education of her son James; to son John McMichael, $5 if he should come into the Province.

A son, George, who was a constable for Walsingham in 1809, enlisted in 1812 and was killed at the Battle of Fort Erie; and a son, Henry, was drowned while crossing the Bay to Long Point, his body being found down the Lake some time later. A daughter, Sarah, while not mentioned in her mother's will, was named by Mr. Owen as having married a Mr. Dresser and having gone to the United States.

APPENDIX II

WILSON FAMILY

THE grandfather of John M. Wilson (1826-1884), who married Rebecca Taylor (1.6.), and of his brother Samuel Wilson (1830-1904), who married Rebecca's sister Sarah Taylor (1.2.), resided at Rich Hill, a village midway between Portadown and Armagh, County Armagh, Ireland. He had 7 children: John (see below), David, Robert, Samuel, Maria, Conay, and Jane.

John Wilson, who was born at Rich Hill, married about 1816 Jane Craig (see Appendix 2—Craig Family) and had 9 children, one of whom died in Ireland. John and Jane, with their family of eight, emigrated to Canada in 1847. They were among the many unfortunates who died of "ship-fever"[a] on their arrival in Montreal, where they were buried. The Wilson orphans were taken to the home of their aunt Rachel (Craig) and uncle Joseph Abraham, who then lived near Prescott, Ont. The children were:

(1) Rachel (1818-1866), who married John McNally (1815-1901) and had 8 children:

1. William, who died at 7 years.
2. Maria, who died at 10 years and was buried in St. John's Anglican cemetery 3 miles south of Simcoe, Norfolk county, Ont.
3. John, who was a bachelor.

a. "Ship-fever" and "jail-fever", according to The New Century Dictionary, are synonyms for typhus fever, which is described as an "acute infectious disease characterized by great prostration, severe nervous symptoms, and a peculiar eruption of reddish spots on the body."

Following the 1846-47 potato famine in Ireland, one and one-half million people migrated from that country during a ten-year period. Of this migration Edwin C. Guillet in The Great Migration, 1937, says: "Crop failure, disease and famine in Ireland in 1846-47 led to mass migration of the destitute in such numbers that almost all restrictions on ships bound for Canadian ports were withdrawn. An observer wrote, 'It would in my opinion have been more humane to have deprived them at once of life'. A particularly virulent form of dysentery, together with smallpox, measles, and 'ship-fever'—similar to that induced by overcrowding in jails—broke out

4. Samuel, who married Phoebe Marsden and had 4 children: (a) Wilson, who died at 14 years; (b) Harvey, who married Mary Cooper and had Elizabeth Olive; (c) Zelma; (d) Fletcher, who had a son Carleton who married Anna Knight and had Edwin Dean, Eunice Alice, and Frederick Walker.
5. Sarah Jane, who was a spinster.

7. Frank, who married Mary Baxendale and had 5 children: (a) Norman, who married Lillian Gibson and had Ethel May and Norma Ruth; (b) Beatrice, who married Ernest Colclough and had Verna Eunice, Muriel Beatrice, and Frederick Leonard; (c) Ethel; (d) Alma, who married Thomas Cooper and had Edna Muriel; and (e) Herbert, who married Elizabeth Hall and had a son, John, who died young.
8. William, who died unmarried in 1919.

(2) Sarah, who married William McCausland of Middleton township, Norfolk county, Ont., and had 8 children: 1. William, who died at 14 years; 2. John, who died young; 3. Ann (1854-1929), who married her first cousin, Jesse Wilson, son of Samuel and Sarah (Taylor) Wilson (see Jesse Wilson 1.2.4.); 4. Jane, who married John Masterton of Saginaw, Mich., and had Minnie, Kate, and William; 5. Lucy, who died unmarried; 6. Rachel, who married Augustus Reeves; 7. Sarah Lena, on most of these vessels, bringing death to some 30,000 people, and the most intense suffering to the survivors. Of slightly more than 100,000 persons who left the British Isles for America in 1847, a total of 17,445 died during the passage, in quarantine, or in hospital. The London Times commented, 'The Blackhole of Calcutta was a mercy compared to the holds of these vessels' . . . The fever attacked its victims with the suddenness of the Black Death of 1665—the first symptom was generally a reeling in the head, followed by a swelling pain, as if the head were going to burst. Next came excrutiating pains in the bones, and then a swelling of the limbs, commencing with the feet, in some cases ascending the body and again descending before it reached the head, stopping at the throat. The period of each stage varied in different patients, some of whom were covered with yellow, watery pimples, and others with red and purple spots that turned into putrid sores."

In 1912 the Ancient Order of Hibernians erected near Quebec a monument to the ship-fever victims, where in 1947 centennial ceremonies were held.
